Extradition Proceedings Under Way, Says Law; Hindenburg Appeals to Foch

International News Service.

Paris, July 7.—Steps are being taken to obtain the extradition of the former Kaiser for trial in London, though no formal representations have yet been made to Holland, Bonar Law announced in the House of Commons this afternoon.

Sidney Dalziel asked if any "moving communications" had passed, the law said he preferred not to answer question.

Leonard Colonel Murray asked the general leader if was aware that "the wishes the former Kaiser had hope." Approving cries of "hear, hear" greeted Murray's interpolation but Bonar Law made no reply.

Back Bay Landlords Flayed by Ford and Woodward

The Webster-Jordan Company, the Back Bay realty concern which recently notified its tenants that any of them "notifying the Board of Health of any nuisance will be served with a legal notice to vacate," was lashed today by Health Commissioner William C. Woodward and Acting Mayor Francis J. W. Ford.

Dr. Woodward declared indignantly that any man dictating in such a way was "a menace."

The commissioner said he could not imagine any persons being so ignorant as to issue such a statement.

"The most flagrant case ever brought to my attention," was any other vitriolic phrase Dr. Woodward used.

"MORONS," SAYS FORD.

Acting-Mayor Ford branded it "a vicious piece of business."

Both the commissioner and the acting Mayor rose to shreds the excuse offered by the Webster-Jordan Company that they did not mean it just that way. The city officials said the meaning was clear enough.

The commissioner insisted any of the concerns tenants to make immediate complaint of any health nuisance.

Acting Mayor Ford says he will follow the case up. He thinks he can show the Webster-Jordan Company that protection of the public health is "very much the business" of the Mayor or acting Mayor.

TENANTS FILE COMPLAINTS.

Meanwhile these tenants are complaining at City Hall. They complain of the increase in rents and of the order prohibiting window signs for renting rooms.

They say, too, that no repairs, paint-

PRESIDENT GOES BEFORE SENATE THURSDAY

Will Lay Treaty of Peace Before Upper House; Urged to Delay Tour

By International News Service.

Washington, July 7.—President Wilson's address at the Capitol on Thursday will be to the Senate only, Secretary Tumulty at New York today advised the White House. The President will appear before the Upper House at 12:15 to lay before it the peace treaty with the League of Nations covenant embodied, and the personnel pact to which America, with Great Britain, would go to the assistance of France in the event of an "unprovoked" attack upon her by Germany.

Indications now are, White House officials said, that the President will be unable to start his proposed speaking tour for at least two weeks after his arrival in Washington. There have been many requests that the President's itinerary include an address at the Methodist centennial at Columbus, O., but as the closing session will be held on July 13, it was

BIG HOLE TORN IN R-34

Dirigible Almost Breaks Away in Gale at Mineola; May Pass Over Boston Tomorrow

Mineola, L. I., July 7.—A hole twenty feet long and ten feet wide was torn in the nose of the giant British dirigible R-34 today in a battle between nearly 1000 men and the aircraft which was being whipped by a thirty-mile gale and an imminent danger of tearing from her moorings.

The gas in the balloons became overheated in the hot sun and the ship suddenly rose skyward. Four hundred men were clinging to the forward and aft gondolas.

The gondolas were torn from their moorings as the dirigible sped skyward and a rope attached to the nose of the R-34 was torn away, pulling with it a big piece of the silk fabric. They operated on the gale whistled revealed to their slack as quickly as possible and finally halted the heavy airship when she was 500 feet above ground. After half an hour's tussle the dirigible was again brought to earth and the work of repairing the rent began.

ALLEGED DRAFT DODGERS CAUGHT IN BEVERLY

No armistice has been extended to draft dodgers, as was again illustrated today when Rosario Sacco of No. 14 Bennett street, Beverly, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Hayes, on the charge of failing to fill out his draft questionnaire. Rosario has been exceedingly elusive, according to the authorities. He has lived in New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Canada. He was arrested at the home of his brother in Beverly during a visit he made today. The Bolshevik assault was made on July 3. The allied advance began the following day.

Fenway Park, July 7.—The Red Sox and Mackmen resumed their double-header program here this afternoon. The cool weather was welcomed by the athletes following their strenuous efforts of last week.

Ed Barrow's club was determined to grab both ends of the twin attraction. To perform this task, however, the Red Sox will have to give Babe Ruth a little more batting support than they did Saturday when the Athletics won two games.

Ruth and Scott are about the only Red Sox regulars who are hitting consistently. And it takes more than a couple of batters to keep a ball club up with the leaders in a spirited pennant race.

$4,173,429 IS AT STAKE IN SUIT OF SCIENTISTS

Attorney Whipple Rests Case for Trustees in the Long Drawn Out Litigation

A total of $4,173,429, representing one more instance of the Christian Science Publication Company, is at stake in the long drawn out litigation that has raised fractions in the Christian Science church. It became known today at a hearing before Judge Frederic Dodge. John B. Watts, business manager of the Christian Science Publishing Company, gave these figures. Watts admitted that there had been an increase of about $2,000,000 in business during the preceding year.

This business, Watts admitted, might be reduced to an empty shell, as John V. Dittemore had declared, if the field was withdrew support from the society publications.

In response to questions from William G. Thompson, counsel for Dittemore, Watts identified letters sent to Dittemore which the directors of the Mother Church attempted to suppress. Dittemore demanded that he turn over to them.

ENJOINED THE DIRECTORS.

The Supreme Court enjoined the directors from taking any action to get possession of those letters, it being alleged by Mr. Dittemore that the directors attempted to suppress them.

SAN JOSE BRINGS 40,000 BUNCHES OF BANANAS

The United Fruit Company steamer San Jose arrived in Boston today from Port Lemon, Port Limon with 1000 passengers, two Jamaican crews, 40,000 stalks and 40,000 bunches of bananas aboard.

The stowaways, Harold Thomas and Cecil Dunn will be deported when the ship sails. Late Friday night when about 250 miles south of Nantucket, officers and crew of the San Jose saw what they believed to be a burning vessel. Life boats were lowered hastily, and preparations to receive the occupants of the burning craft were made, only to discover it to be a whaler trying out blubber.

RUSH FOR SPECIAL LIQUOR LICENSE

Boston once more became a dot on the liquor map today, when a number of liquor emporiums threw open their doors to thirsty citizens for the sale of 2.75 per cent. beer.

All day long perspring liquor dealers, tending to embonpoint, rushed back and forth from the Excise Commission offices to the City Hall Annex, making applications for the special licenses, which are good until after demobilization.

As the day grew warmer the rush for licenses increased and saloon after saloon was thrown open once more. In many cases the word had gone round and lines of the thirsty were formed outside the doors.

Those special licenses were sold for $300. They are good for all kinds of places, including bars, hotels, cafes and stores which deal only in bottled goods. By noon time more than 450 applications had been made and it was expected that this number would be increased to 900 before night.

This afternoon the Massachusetts Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, of which James J. Doherty is president, met in the Elks' Club and discussed the situation.

use his influence to save the ex-Kaiser from trial by the allies. He repeats his offer to substitute himself for the former emperor for trial.

Colonel Reinhard, commanding the Reinhard division of the German volunteer army, personally called upon Colonel Parker, head of the American commission, at the Adlon Hotel, requesting him to appeal to the United States government through a letter to General John J. Pershing, to use its influence for the abolition of the clause in the peace treaty providing for the surrender of the ex-Kaiser.

Colonel Reinhard argued that if the enemy insisted upon the "honor and Kaiser" clauses, a majority of the German officers would resign from the army, which might result in the dissolution of the army, leaving the country at the mercy of chaos.

A German who had acted as interpreter at the meeting informed me that Colonel Parker had promised to write a letter. When he left the Adlon Hotel, however, the American officer refused to confirm this statement, saying: "I cannot be interviewed on the subject."

Dutch Court of Justice to Decide Question of Kaiser's Extradition

Amsterdam, July 7.—The Court of Justice at Utrecht, Holland, is to decide the question of the ex-Kaiser's extradition, it was learned through semi-official channels today. Dutch lawyers are agreed that the extradition laws are not applicable to the case of the former emperor, the latter is not guilty of crimes named in the statutes.

British to Imprison in Tower Those Responsible for Death of Edith Cavell

By International News Service.

London, July 7.—Prominent German officials, alleged to have been implicated in the murders of Nurse Edith Cavell and other civilians in Belgium, probably will be brought to England within the next few days and lodged in the Tower of London, the Daily Express understands today.

Other prisoners intended for the Tower include commandants of German prison camps, responsible for the deliberate murder of defenseless British soldiers, it was stated by the Daily Express.

These trials are expected to open in August, if the preliminary arrangements can be completed in that time.

In commenting upon the offers of Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, former German Chancellor, Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, former chief of staff of the German army, and Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria to stand trial for the ex-Kaiser, the Daily Express said:

"It is impossible to take these attempts at vicarious culpability seriously. If Germany had won the war would Bethmann-Hollweg, Hindenburg and the sons of the ex-Kaiser have received much sympathy from the 'All Highest' if they had sought to prove their responsibility for the war? That is an index to the amount they deserve now."

The Berne correspondent of the Daily News telegraphed the following statement from the Prince Consort of Holland (the husband of Queen Wilhelmina):

"Germany has signed an undertaking to deliver the ex-Kaiser for judgment. If Germany demands it, we would be obliged to yield."

Prince Henry denied that he had seen either the ex-Kaiser or the former Crown Prince since they arrived in Holland.

Roble and Coughlin, neither of whom is yet eighteen years old, are bathing some distance down the river from the point where the girls were lurking in the water near the old powder house. They had left the water and were just going to their homes when they heard the screams of the girls. Without hesitation the two boys ran along the bank till they reached the spot nearest the girls, none of whom could swim and who had been driven beyond their depth by the swift current and incoming tide.

SCORES 'SECRET GOVERNMENT OF THE U. S.'

Representative Graham Applies This Term to the Council of National Defence

By International News Service.

Washington, July 7.—The secret government of the United States" was the term applied to the advisory commission of the Council of National Defence by Representative William J. Graham, chairman of the select committee on expenditures in the War Department, at today's session of that committee. Chairman Graham, to whom the committee had delegated the task of examining the minutes of the council and reporting on those portions he considered pertinent to its work, read a report, in which he said:

"An examination of these minutes discloses the fact that a commission of seven men chosen by the President seems to have dwarfed the entire system of purchasing war supplies, planned a gross extravagance, designed a system of food control and selected Herbert Hoover as its director, determined on a daylight saving scheme and, in a word, designed practically every war measure which the Government subsequently enacted, and that it did all this behind closed doors weeks and even months before the Congress of the United States declared war on Germany."

"In almost every meeting before the declaration of war," the report continued, "the commission discussed and recommended the council (which consisted of the cabinet members) these plans for fixing the prices and selling to the government.

"When war was declared on April 6, this machinery began to move, headed by the advisory commission of seven men, who were in effect, as shown by these minutes, the executive government of the United States, so far as the purchase of supplies was concerned. At times the activities of this advisory commission was such as greatly to embarrass the cabinet, and it became necessary for the cabinet to protest against them."

The report also said that the advisory commission were advised that if they were violating the law in permitting committees of the Council of National Defence to direct purchases from their own companies."

Sinn Feiners Ready to Launch 'Victory Loan' Drive

By DANIEL O'CONNELL,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Dublin, July 7.—The Sinn Feiners will open their "victory loan" drive within ten days, it was announced today. The leaders anticipate success and plans are being made for meetings and parades with plenty of brass and bands. Some believe it will be oversubscribed.

The subscriptions are being allotted in proportion to the size of the Sinn Fein vote in the last parliamentary election. Bonds would have been issued sooner, it was explained, if Finance Minister Collins of the Sinn Fein cabinet had not been so busy avoiding the police.

Sinn Fein chieftains believe the only danger to the success of the loan is the introduction of a new home rule measure in the House of Commons in the meantime.

BOY PROTESTS GOING BACK TO 'MOTHER'

Cleasby Lad, in Court, Puzzled by Rival Claims of Women

Providence, July 7.—Testimony of sensational character marked the hearing today, before Judge Chester H. Tanner in the Superior Court, of the claims of two women for the possession of ten-year-old Frank Cleasby.

Frank G. Cleasby of this city testified that he and Mrs. George W. Townsend, of Chicago, with whom he eloped from Providence fourteen years ago, were the child's parents. Mrs. Townsend and the wife whom Cleasby deserted at that time are the disputants for the possession of the boy.

Cleasby testified that after Mrs. Townsend had abandoned their two children in Rodie, Ind., he brought the boy Frank to Providence, where he was forgiven by his wife, who accepted Frank as her own son.

BOY PROTESTS RETURN.

Mrs. Townsend, who admitted that she had a husband in New Jersey at the time, corroborated Cleasby's story of their elopement and the birth of their two children, but declared that Cleasby was a confirmed drunkard and that she fled from Rodie to Chicago fearing violence at his hands and to obtain work for the support of herself and children. She denied she had willfully deserted the children.

The climax of the case came when the little boy himself was called to the stand. In tears, he protested against being compelled to return to Rodie with the woman he has called his mother, saying that she was a drinking woman. Questioned by attorneys for the Cleasbys, he testified that he had seen his mother intoxicated and had also seen her kissing "a man named Thompson," to whom she was later married.

"I'm sue your mother?" an attorney for the cleasbys asked, indicating the witness.

"I don't know whether she is or not," replied the boy tearfully.

Frank H. Wills, attorney for Mrs. Townsend, who charges Cleasby with kidnaping the child, asked Judge Tanner to continue the case until his client could obtain depositions from Chicago to prove that she was a fit person to have custody of the child, in compliance with his request the case was postponed the case until September. The boy was thereupon taken, under police guard, to the home of his foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin G. Cleasby, at No. 43 Aslton street, where he has been living since his father returned to Providence.

WOMAN'S DRAMATIC PLEA.

Frank G. Cleasby, the father of the boy, is at present employed in the same factory in which he worked before his elopement with the present Mrs. Townsend in 1905. His wife is a bookkeeper in another factory. She is a daughter of Dr. C. E. Barnard of Centredale.

Mrs. Townsend made a dramatic plea to the court before the case was postponed.

"The boy's mind has been poisoned against me," she declared, after she had heard Frank say on the witness stand in response to a question that he would like to see his little sister, Lola Belle, in Rodie, but "not if he had to go with her."

"I throw myself on the mercy of the court," said Mrs. Townsend, visibly distressed. "I came alone here from Chicago to get back my boy after searching everywhere for him for two years."

pointed out that the President probably will be unable to accept.

It is known that some of the President's friends have advised him to abandon the speaking tour entirely, or for the present at least. They have urged him, it was learned, at least to wait until after it becomes known what the treaty will do with reference to the treaty and the league covenant, before going before the people.

The President will leave New York tomorrow at 2 o'clock, arriving in Washington between 10 and 11 o'clock. Plans for his reception here were being made today, and one of the features will be the erection of a temporary platform in Union Station, through which he will pass on the way to his automobile.

Austrians Will Be Given Two Weeks to Consider Treaty Before Signing

By JOHN T. PARKERSON,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, July 7.—No formal ceremony will mark the presentation of remaining Austria peace terms which were taken under final consideration by the Council of Five today.

They will simply be handed over by the secretariat of the peace conference at St. Germain. At the same time the Austrians will be informed of the time limit, probably a fortnight, within which the associated powers will allow for perusal and observation before signing.

Proofs of the complete Austrian treaty, containing 366 separate articles, many of them closely following the lines of the German treaty, were turned over to the Council of Five after the printers had worked on them feverishly all day Sunday. They covered seventy-six pages.

While the Austrians are studying the complete terms the Council of Five hopes to reach an amicable settlement upon the Italian situation involving rival claims to territory on the Adriatic. American delegates seem more than ever convinced that the spirit of co-operation shown by the new Italian envoys presages a satisfactory agreement.

Germans Celebrate Fourth of July in Berlin

By International News Service.

Copenhagen, July 7.—America's national holiday—the Fourth of July—was celebrated in Berlin, with Germans participating, for the first time in history, said a dispatch from Berlin to the Politiken.

Sixty American soldiers and men of the ranks made the trip to Potsdam on the launch Kaiser Wilhelm, while German along the Spree River waved hats and handkerchiefs. A German band on board played "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Later there was a baseball game on the court of Sans Souci Palace, while a German "movie" operator recorded the event.

In the evening there was dancing, with many Americans taking German girls for their partners. When the dance broke up there were numerous good-by kisses, and one German maid took so much to be separated from her American escort that she had to be forced to comply.

Acting Mayor Ford and Health Commissioner Woodward Invite Complaints of Tenants

ing, papering or carpenter work have been done, so that the excuse of "high cost of materials" does not hold.

Health Commissioner Woodward will take immediate steps to have legislation enacted which will protect any tenant making complaint of a nuisance. He said, in the course of his remarks:

"Any man who dictates in such a manner is a menace himself, it doesn't matter what these people intended to say—the reading of them is clear enough. I can't imagine any group of individuals being so ignorant to issue such a statement.

"Yes, complaints have come to me personally about these people. I conferred with the mayor about it. Altogether it is a most unusual situation, in fact the most flagrant case ever brought to my attention. There should be a law to take care of such individuals. I shall take the matter up immediately.

"It is the individual duty of every man, woman and child to report to this department any health irregularity, and when persons come in alone and threatens another individual for so doing it's time that action be prosecuted. How are we going to have a clean, wholesome, healthy city with such persons trying to monopolize the sentiment expressed on that card which was sent to the tenants? Personally I invite the tenants who live in houses operated or owned by that concern, or anyone else, to complain to this department of health nuisance. It is their solemn duty."

ACTING MAYOR'S STATEMENT.

Acting Mayor Ford said:

"It was indeed a vicious piece of business, on making what their excuse may be we are not cognizant of the card, and no matter what their design or intent was, the meaning certainly can't be misinterpreted by the public, or rather certain drafts which the Governor has not signed as yet, are defective for this reason, they do not deal with the individual. The proposed law will punish such persons by fines and jail, would only affect the the corporation or company. What we should like to know is what would affect the actual person to blame.

"I shall follow this matter closely and when that responsible for issuing the company says it's none of the Mayor's business I think we can show him to the contrary. The health of the citizens' health is very much the business of the Mayor and the Acting Mayor."

MILLIONS AT STAKE IN SCIENTISTS' SUIT

them, and this destroy evidence that may be valuable in the controversy between the trustees and the directors. Judge Dodge declined to have the letters read at the present stage of the case, although they may be made public by Mr. Dittmore against Mr. Dickey and the other directors.

Mr. Watts said that a day or two after March 17 last Mr. Dickey had formally told him that it would be wise to dismiss Mr. Dittimore from the board of directors.

Mr. Watts denied that it had been his policy, or that of the trustees, not to make any subscription to the publishing society who were in sympathy with Mr. Dittimore or the other directors.

LETTER FROM DICKEY.

Mr. Whipple read a letter dated January 10, 1918, from Adam H. Dickey to his associates on the board of directors, in which Mr. Dickey announced the idea of dismissing all the trustees of the publishing society at once. He suggested that the last member of the board of trustees (Mr. Wittemore) be removed and the trustees of the Italian situation is necessary. Records of the directors bearing on this subject also were read by Mr. Whipple, in which it appeared that ex-Governor Bates advised the directors against the removal of one or all of the trustees of the publishing society.

Herbert W. Eustace was recalled by Mr. Whipple and said that Edwin A. Merritt, a trustee and director, was the first to suggest that Lamont Bowlands be made a trustee of the publishing society. Mr. Eustace said that he objected to the secretary of the directors having sent a telegram to Mr. Bowlands asking him to come to Boston. It was not the business of the directors, according to Mr. Eustace, to have anything to do with the selection of a trustee. Mr. Eustace added that he was disgusted with what was done by Mr. Merritt.

At this point Mr. Whipple rested the case for the trustees.

MOTHER SAYS SENATOR WILL AID SON "IN OWN WAY"

Los Angeles, Cal., July 7.—Despite the frank admissions of guilt made by the prisoner, preliminary steps were taken today for the opening of a legal battle to save Harry S. New, Jr., who claims United States Senator New as his father, from being held legally responsible for the murder of beautiful Frieda J. Lesser, his sweetheart.

Temporary insanity undoubtedly will be made the basis of the court battle to save the life of the prisoner, it was stated by his friends today.

What prompted beautiful Frieda Lesser to absolutely refuse to marry New, despite the fact she had vowed her love for him, was an angle the police today were attempting to solve.

New has changed his story and declares the real reason he shot and killed his sweetheart in lonely Topanga canyon was her absolute refusal to marry him and not because she had told him she would undergo an operation to escape motherhood.

The police believe New may have had another motive in driving around in his sedan with the body for three hours before visiting the police station and confessing the crime. They are working on the theory that he tried to hide the body, but lost his nerve.

DENY SUICIDE ATTEMPT.

Reports sent broadcast that New attempted suicide in his cell were declared untrue by the police today. A special guard, however, is watching the prisoner day and night.

Whether Miss Lesser was to have become a mother will not be determined definitely before the autopsy tomorrow, according to the police. The report that the physicians had determined that the girl was not expecting motherhood is said by the officers to be baseless, so far as known at the present time.

Still confessing his ardent love for the girl, New repeated today that he had talked and argued for hours concerning marriage and the fate of the expected child, but it was neither the question of a postponement of marriage nor of abortion concerning the child that had caused the shooting.

"You have decided, finally then, Frieda, that you will not marry me?" New declared was the last word he spoke to his fiancee.

"Yes," she was said to have answered finally.

NEAR BREAKDOWN.

Then the young woman turned her face and as she leaned forward in the rear seat of the automobile and gazed at the darkened roadside, came the crash of the revolver and she edumpsied in death to the bottom of the tonneau. During the last twenty-four hours New appeared near the point of breaking down under the strain of his deed. For hours he sat in his cell with his face buried in his hands. The prisoner indicated he had experienced a change of heart since committing the crime himself and now desired to live above all else.

He repeatedly expressed confidence that Senator New would provide financial and legal assistance.

H. H. Dixon, who employed New as a truck driver at the American Laundry Company here, has given assurance that an attorney will be retained for the prisoner at the inquest and arraignment in justice court.

Coroner Hartwell today prepared to hold the inquest tomorrow. Prior to the assembling of the coroner's jury surgeons will examine the body of the slain girl to definitely determine whether she was expecting motherhood.

Mrs. Alice Lesser, mother of Miss Lesser, remained in a critical condition at her home today. Her condition probably will save New from the unpleasant position of having to face the heartbroken mother of his victim at the inquest.

Senator Will Aid Son, Declares Mother of Confessed Murderer

By LEOLA ALLARD.

Copyright, 1919, by Chicago Herald Examiner.

Chicago, July 7.—To the world United States Senator Harry S. New of Indiana may "refuse to be interviewed" about Harry S. New in California, who has confessed to the murder of his sweetheart, but to Mrs. Edith Burger, the mother of that California Harry S. New, self-confessed slayer of Frieda Lesser in Los Angeles, the reports of the Senator's attitude offer no weight.

"Senator New never denied he is Harry's father—he can't that kind of a man," she declared, steadfast in her faith. She passed through Chicago from Indianapolis to help her boy, who is in trouble. And she refused to be worried by press dispatches from Washington which told of Senator New's attitude of denial. She said:

"Senator New never denied that he is Harry's father. He isn't that kind of a man. Why, he has acknowledged Harry from the day of his birth. He has supported him, he has educated him. The boy is the very image of his father, even to the little brown spot in his eye—a mark of the New family for generations."

"But Senator New says your boy has no claim on him," I told her. "He says he won't help him."

The little woman looked at me steadily, and her eyes told her unbelief. "Never!" she exclaimed. "He never said it; Harry isn't that kind. He didn't treat me fairly, perhaps, and maybe he doesn't want to acknowledge the boy before the world, on account of his position, but he will help him in his own way. He must always do things in his own way. That's Harry. He won't fail. Oh, I know he won't. He's got the biggest heart, and today he loves me better than anyone in the world. I know that."

HAS FOUGHT THE WORLD.

And this, after many years of disappointment, during which time Mrs. Burger says she has fought the world, her own feelings and the battles of her nameless son. Her face like parchment, her hair gone white, her shoulders stooped, her voice, I think, the gentlest I ever have heard, this mother is fierce, at times, with the pain of having the mistake made when she was sixteen dragged from under its decent covering of the years.

And through the years she seems to have clung on to some of her illusions, especially those concerning Senator New, whom she says she has worshipped since she was a girl. He was her first beau.

"There is no question about who the boy's mother is. Mothers are like that. She sees no faults. She remembers nothing he may have done that worried her in the years past. She says his record is clean, and that the girl can be killed in his first sweetheart. He had known her but three months. The mother did not approve the match, and now she despises herself for leaving California to visit her daughter, Indiana.

"It wouldn't have happened had I been at home," she argues. "He always told me everything. He thought all women were good. He called me his little sweetheart. If this girl was in trouble—well, he knew my life story, and he wouldn't want to be the cause of any other woman suffering as I have suffered. He had good principles, my boy, and he never lied. It was like him to give himself up after he did that.

SAYS HE WASN'T SANE.

"He wasn't sane, of course. I know the moment when the girl he loved told him she was in trouble, for that she wouldn't marry him, that his motherless past must have loomed up before him and he couldn't bear it."

Then Mrs. Burger told the chapters of the story that explained the boy's being, the love she felt for Senator New, the marriage she contracted after he left her and married another, the daughter born of the second marriage and the tragedy of July 5 that is like a knife inside, cutting loose her heartstrings. She showed no self-sympathy and no malice. She said:

"Senator New lived in the same town I lived—Indianapolis. His father, John C. New, was a fine man, like himself. He was at one time Consul-General to England. When I was sixteen I fell madly in love with Harry. There was nothing in life so sacred to me as that love, and all through the years it has remained so. I was his slave. For sixteen years I lived with him and was true to him. When we had been everything to each other for twelve years a son was born to me. That was Harry.

"FATHER SEEMED DEVOTED."

"The boy was to me all that I would have had his father to be—and more. I lived through that boy. His father seemed devoted to him. Every one at home knew—the real story, we wanted him to marry me, and he promised to do so. But always he postponed it, and my faith never wavered. It hasn't yet.

"When the boy was four years old and he had always been the image of his father, even to his walk—Harry left me. He met an actress, Catherine McClain, who then playing in 'Faust-up-to-Date.' She was beautiful and wore tights. Her figure was perfect. Her stage name was McClain, but her real name was Brown.

"That was many years ago, but it's just like yesterday to me. I don't know why he did it. He must have known why, and there must have been a good reason. He was always good to me. I believe now he loves me better than any other woman in the world.

"For years we all lived in the same town, me with my boy and he with his wife. It was hard. You must see that. But I believe somehow it would all come right in the end. I've always had a wonderful belief in the Almighty, and I thought he would fix it somehow if I believed.

"The papers said yesterday that, when I heard what had happened to my boy, I said: 'They'll hang him!' I didn't. I wouldn't think that. I said God would take him before he'd make me suffer the tortures of seeing him hanged. No, that won't ever happen.

"Well, the years went on, and Senator New always supported the child, and, when he grew old enough, he sent him to school and paid all his expenses. Then I finally married Sam D. Burger, about twelve years after Mr. New had married. Again my sun crept back under a cloud, and, after a few years, a woman separated us. For years before my husband died, I did not see him. We had a daughter—a lovely girl—now twenty-two and a great comfort to me now in my old age.

"I felt that I must get away from the old surroundings, and Harry and Edna and I went to California, where in Glendale we made our home.

"Then Harry, a stenographer, Harry was discharged from the army after his trip with the troops into Mexico. He contracted tuberculosis there and hasn't been strong since. He tried to re-enlist so that he could go to France, but his health prevented his being accepted. He was a member of Battery A and was made a corporal in Mexico.

"Then three months ago he met this girl—Frieda Lesser. She worked at the same place my daughter was employed. My daughter told Harry that friends, some of the boys liked had said she had had just where she wanted him, that she had tried to get him there and then throw him over. He wouldn't listen to her. One day Edna came home and told me that Frieda had made made that remark, and that she answered her, 'You will do that over my dead body.' She laughed at her and shrugged her shoulders."

UNION THREAT TO QUIT FISH BUSINESS

Crews Arriving in Port Today Join Strike After Getting Pay

Members of the Fishermen's Union, who are demanding more money, declared today that unless the owners accede to their demands they will give up fishing entirely.

The men, who held a meeting last night, declare that, as a result, that it would be foolish for them to continue to go fishing when they were unable to obtain a living wage. They are confident, however, that some sort of an agreement can be reached.

Six fishing vessels arrived in Boston today, bringing 200,000 pounds of cod, halibut and hake, with about 100 swordfish. Some of the schooners were manned by non-union crews, but the majority of the fishermen were union men who quit as soon as they received their money for this trip.

The catch was exceedingly small for a Monday, but nevertheless low prices were the rule. Large cod sold for 4½ cents, small cod 2 cents, swordfish 22½ cents.

Representative Niland referred to the "filling in" material which is being dumped in an area between Revere and Orient Heights. He said: "All the swill, refuse, garbage, offal and everything that has a stench to it this side of Lower street is brought to East Boston and presented to us."

During his interview with the health commissioner he was informed by attaches of the Health Department that a concern was dumping material at that particular spot without a permit, and was also admitted at the conference, according to Mr. Niland, that the commission had been informed that some one was dumping refuse at the spot.

Upon being informed that a concern was using the dump without a permit, Mr. Niland insisted that the teams stop using the place today. This matter the commissioner promised to take up immediately.

SENT TO PRISON FOR SINGING IRISH SONG

Jack O'Sheehan Gets Two-Year Sentence for Appearing at Concert; Many Others Jailed

Two years in prison for singing a song at a concert!

Not only did Jack O'Sheehan, of Roxbury, Indiana, go to jail for two years for his vocal efforts, but he was dragged from the concert platform and was roughly mauled by the police in the bargain.

O'Sheehan is only one of dozens who have been jailed for giving vent in melodic form to their ideal of an Irish republic, and the whole list of imprisonments or fines of Irishmen and Irishwomen by the British government shows that several have been jailed for as long as two and three months for singing "The Soldier's Song."

The text of "The Soldier's Song," published here, was sent to the American from the Washington, New York, Berne or Rome bureau of Eamon De Valera. In the Irish republic the soldiers' song was what might be called the campfire song, and it was sung at the close of practically all the meetings of the Irish volunteers.

THE SOLDIER'S SONG.

Lyrics and music of the soldiers' song.

Soldiers are we,
Whose lives are pledged to Ireland;
Some have from a land beyond the wave
Sworn to be free,
No more our ancient sireland
Shall shelter the despot or the slave.
Tonight we march to the sound of the guns
In Erin's cause, come what may;
To Morrow, perhaps, the world shall ring
We'll chant a soldier's song.

Chorus.

In valley and glen, in city and town
Our patriots fight for the land we love,
Proudly we march to the call of the gun
Defying friend and foe,
With cheering rifle and bursting shell
They'll learn to fear the Irish yell
As on we march to victory.
Soldiers are we,
We'll chant a soldier's song.

Sons of the stock that fought at the Pass
With Clan Na Gael we're hurling defiance
The sacred rights of Ireland
Have called forth a nation's challenge
Our fame's free now we're marching to show
That Irish blood still flows as of yore
Tho' many fall we'll answer the call
To fight for the Soldier's Song.

The Gap of Dalcer.

GIRL ALSO ARRESTED.

Songs, at the present time are in the days of old, are playing a big part in the political history of Ireland and warrior bards, from patriotic lays inspired certain irons, from patriotic lays inspired against foreign rule in Ireland—in fact, several instances when the moment of inspiration seized them. Miss K. McDonald of Westport, County Mayo, was the first arrested for singing "The Soldier's Song" and was sentenced to three months' imprisonment or fifty shillings fine or one month.

Robert Holland of Inchicore, Dublin, was given six months for singing "The Soldier's Song." Thomas Fitzpatrick, John Kirkett and Roland Fitzharris were each sentenced to two months' imprisonment, time. Joseph Mulhearty in Carlow was sentenced to two months for playing in a band contrary to the proclamation of the Lord Lieutenant and director of the Cavan & Leitrim Railway, Bernard J. Reddin and J. O'Driscoll, of Boyle, were each sentenced to prison for six months for singing "The Soldier's Song."

TWO MONTHS EACH.

In Westport, Mayo, Byrne was given two months with hard labor and Edward Barrett of Ballaghaderreen was also given two months for singing patriotic Irish songs. Miss Mary McManus of Athlone was fined £10 for selling a copy of "The Tout of England," although it is said was written in 1798.

While the British government was thundering against the world condemnation of the Germans for their refusal to allow the Belgians to play their national anthem, and while it was authorizing the jailing when amongst Irish men and women to sing for the singing of Irish national songs.

Another song for the singing of which men and women were given six and eight months' imprisonment was "The Felons of Our Land," written by Thomas Clarke Luby, who was tried for treason-felony in 1867 and sentenced to penal servitude for life. He was released in 1871 and died in New York in 1898. His body was brought to Ireland and buried in Glasnevin cemetery, Dublin, with great honors.

FELONS OF OUR LAND.

Till we have taken back from the foe
Each rood of land he claims as his own,
Each river and stream and valley and glen
And each sea-girt rock that stands in the main,
We'll keep our land in a state of war.
For we are felons, we can't forget
That Ireland's trampled on, and yet
Our country's sacred, while tyrants
And cowards
Are free to walk the earth.
We're exiles for Ireland's sake, for we
Love Ireland more than she loves the free,
And scorn the lot that would have us be
But wild geese,
Since we can't find rest in our own land
We'll find it in no other,
But wander o'er the wide world in grief
Like the children of Lir.

BOY SCOUT, FOND OF ADVENTURE, IS MISSING

Stories of Bravery and Love of Movies Believed to Have Led David Shea From Scituate

A fondness for the movies coupled with a vivid imagination, which had been fired by scenes of stirring pictures are to relate that Scouts throughout New England will assist in finding him.

Shea left his home in Scituate on June 22, wearing a Scout suit. With $3 in his pocket and, accompanied by a friend named Hector Stetson, he took the 3.1 p. m. train for Boston. On arriving in that city, Stetson says, they spent the rest of the night at the North Station, where he left Shea at 7 a. m. to visit some friends. When he left him, Shea says, he was looking up excursion rates to Portland.

The boy's guardian, Catherine McGarvey of Scituate, is very anxious to locate him, as, if he does not appear soon, the Boy Scouts throughout New England intend to start a search for him. Shea, according to her, was a constant attendant at the motion picture shows and had at various times expressed a desire to go to sea, a project which are things has at last proved too powerful for him.

ADAMS DRAWS OUT IN FAVOR OF PERKINS

Promises Hearty Support to Colonel in Candidacy for State Treasurer

Mayor Charles H. Adams of Melrose has withdrawn his candidacy for the Republican nomination for State Treasurer in favor of Colonel Frank S. Perkins of Salem. Mayor Adams, in a letter to a friend, says he will vote for Colonel Perkins.

"I'll be just back from service in France with a brilliant record," writes Mayor Adams. "and I should find no pleasure in a campaign against a soldier who has served with such distinction in the greatest of wars.

"I know the general desire of the party to have upon the State ticket a representative of the 200,000 young men who went from Massachusetts to fight under our flag. In this feeling I certainly share."

Colonel Perkins has written to Mayor Adams thanking him for his consideration in withdrawing and also in promising to support him.

Mixed Summer Foods The Cause Of Much Indigestion

SUMMER days are days of careless living, kitchens too hot for cooking, cold lunches at the homes of friends, open-air picnics, with the result that many a family is down with indigestion.

Give the stomach and bowels a new start by taking a dose of a good laxative-tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Then put variety into your diet by eating more warm food. It is more easily digested.

A bottle of Syrup Pepsin can be bought at any drug store for 50c and $1, the latter the family size. It acts so gently and safely that it can be given even to a baby in constipation, indigestion, "summer colds" and similar ills.

The formula on which Syrup Pepsin is based was written by Dr. Caldwell over 30 years ago. It is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that trains the stomach-muscles to do their work naturally so that medicines can again be dispensed with. Over 6 million bottles of Syrup Pepsin are sold by druggists every year. That is recommendation in itself.

If you have never used Syrup Pepsin, send your address for a free trial bottle to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 460 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

THE TURKISH CIGARETTE

"A ROSE by any other name would smell as sweet"—but cigarettes of any other tobacco than Turkish don't smoke as enjoyably.

The reason Murads are demanded by thousands of smokers is that they are made of 100% pure Turkish tobacco—the world's most famous tobacco for cigarettes—and so conceded.

That is why many manufacturers boast of even a dash of Turkish tobacco in their brands.

It is true that "ordinary" cigarettes cost a trifle less.

$8,000,000 IN WORK BY N. E. RED CROSS

500,000 Women in Five States Produced 29,621,763 Articles as Share in Winning War

The part played in winning the war by the women of the New England States of Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Rhode Island, working through the chapters, branches and auxiliaries of the New England Division of the American Red Cross, is shown with startling emphasis in a report made public by the New England Division Headquarters in this city.

These women produced 29,621,763 articles during the twenty-three months from July 1, 1917, to May 31 of this year. The estimated value of the articles reached the enormous total of $8,720,452.52.

The principal articles made included surgical dressings, hospital garments and supplies, refugee garments and articles for soldiers and sailors.

500,000 AT WORK.

There was an army of more than half a million women engaged in this work in the five New England States named.

These figures for the New England division make a splendid showing in the total chapter production for the thirteen divisions of the Red Cross in the United States. The report of the home-wide work shows that the estimated 8,000,000 volunteer women workers produced 354,864,855 articles valued at $31,149,937 in the eighteen months preceding January 1, 1919.

In producing this enormous volume of supplies for America's fighting forces for the relief of people in the war-swept countries, it is estimated that these patriotic women contributed nearly 200,000,000 hours of work, the equivalent of the entire working time for one year of 125,000 men.

The report of the work covering the whole country deals with the 149 standardized articles produced by women workers, there being no [illegible] determining the value or [illegible] onemed in the production of [illegible] articles of a miscellaneous character. Not the least important of the labors of the Red Cross industrial army has been the reclamation of clothing and equipment for the army, approximately 3,000,000 articles, including shirts, underwear, socks, blankets, etc., having been repaired in chapter workrooms during the last six months of last year.

STANDARD ARTICLES MADE.

Standard articles are grouped under four classifications, surgical dressings, hospital garments and supplies, refugee garments and articles for soldiers and sailors, this latter including knitted articles which in turn include sweaters, helmets, socks, wristlets and mufflers.

The number of articles of each class produced, together with their value, was as follows: Surgical dressings, 300,836,071, valued at $13,-922,952; hospital garments and supplies, 29,422,380, valued at $26,818,-643; refugee garments, 4,111,402, valued at 5,850,143; articles for soldiers and sailors, 20,428,902, valued at $35,-206,414.

Of the 354,868,855 standard articles turned out by the chapter workers 24,250,000 were utilized in Red Cross work in this country, 21,500,000 were placed at the disposal of the Surgeon General of the Army, and 236,511,290 were shipped to the stricken countries of Europe and Asia.

The allotment to each of these countries was: France, 221,530,652; Italy, 70,272,768; England, 2,253,942; Siberia, 1,214,267; Russia, 262,285; Serbia, 246,761; Greece, 11,067; Palestine, 10,036; Manila, 18,761; Denmark, 8,302.

HICKSON TELLS OF THE POWER OF HEALING

"I Am Simply Calling Forth the Healing Power of Christ," Noted Layman Declares

James Moore Hickson, the Christian healer, whose reported miraculous cures by the laying on of his hands have aroused nation-wide interest, today began a crusade in Boston, under the auspices of the Episcopal Church here, "to restore the power of healing through the instrumentality of Christ."

"Christ came not only to preach, but to heal," he declared. "That was the church's duty to be doing today. He gave His church the power to heal, and that power has never been revoked. If the church has not that power today, then we are living in a fools' paradise.

"It happens that I am a member of the Episcopal Church. But it is through Christ, and not through any power of my own that good is accomplished, and this movement is therefore purely Christian and not sectarian. In New York and Philadelphia Jews, Roman Catholics and non-conformists unite with me in meetings as well as Episcopalians. I never ask a man what his creed is. It is enough that he has faith."

AVOID SENSATIONALISM.

Asked to relate some of the more remarkable instances of cures effected through his instrumentality, Mr. Hickson refused to do so on the ground that he wished above all things to avoid any semblance of sensationalism.

"The power of Christ knows no limitations," he declared, when asked if he would admit that any case would be considered hopeless. "Doctors know their limitations. They extract medicines from vegetables and mineral material, knowing full well that they can do so much and no more.

"My mission to Boston, as well as my mission to this country, is to restore the power of healing through the instrumentality of Christ in His church.

THE POWER OF HEALING.

"There is the power of healing through Christ. This was evident in the early church. It is evident to anyone reading closely the New Testament that Christ came to heal the sick. This power was given to the Christian church. My power does not be in me, but in Him. I am only here the agent to bring out His power of healing.

"My special work in Boston is to do all in my power to bring out this truth long forgotten.

"I am not here to oppose or to criticise any similar movement, but to emphasize the truth that we must restore the power to heal in the church; that people who are deadly ill, suffering all sorts of ills can come to Christ and through faith in Him can be restored.

"There is pain and disease in the world. Many souls are weary and downcast over their ills. Must they resort to material means for their cure?

NOT A NEW POWER.

"Must they use every remedy, when the simple one is to believe that the Master has this healing power and will share it with the afflicted?

"It is not any new power; it is not any new Gospel. It is not any new venture in the Christian church, but belonged to it in early days. If we read the New Testament we find that He went about doing and and healed.

"This was His mission to the world. Could it possibly be this teaching? Can we awaken in humanity weary with pain and suffering this relief which He will give?

"This is what my mission in Boston means; getting back to the healing power of the Master. Wonderful is this power when it is acknowledged.

NOT MENTAL HEALING.

"There is a difference between mental and spiritual healing. I have nothing to do with mental healing. All things are possible to him that believeth.'

"More of this power is needed in the modern church. It is exercised through faith. My ministry as a layman of the church is merely to bring out this opportunity, which has been hidden. If we call it forth it will respond. We need not go on suffering pain when One stands near us willing and ready upon our faith to give us his grace.

"Mind you, it is not any thing new. It is simply and solely turning towards the healing power of Christ.

Make that evident.

CORRECT MISUNDERSTANDINGS.

"It is not mind cure. I repeat this, because I know there is misunderstanding around.

"I am simply calling forth the healing power of the Master. Please make that plain if I am to have any publicity."

Mr. Hickson was anxious that his mission in Boston should be rightly understood. When asked if he would hold his meetings in Trinity Church, he said he could give no definite information about it and has not yet decided where to hold his conferences.

STUDIES THE BIBLE.

At the Church of St. John the Evangelist it was reported that there is no likelihood of any gathering of this type being held in that church. The Church of the Advent on Brimmer street has been offered, but nothing definite about arrangements could be learned.

Mr. Hickson is constantly studying the Bible. At his bedside in the Boston hotel the Bible was opened to the passages of healing which he is constantly pouring over and preparing his service of turning the masses to the healing power of the Master.

PLAYGROUNDS IN CAMBRIDGE OPENED

Large Number of Star Athletes Among This Year's Instructors for Children

This was one big day for Cambridge children, the occasion being the opening of the various playgrounds of the University City. Timothy F. Downey of the High and Latin School was in charge as superintendent. He was assisted by John J. McLaughlin, who served as acting superintendent last season. Miss Bertha Chapin, a graduate of the Sargent School, had charge of the folk dancing and Miss May Ahern acted as pianist.

Not for many years has there been such a galaxy of star athletes who served as masters at the playgrounds. Cyril Hines, captain of the football and baseball teams at Rindge Technical School; George "Tubby" White, the former Dover star; Joseph Gambon, a "Y. D." boy who came home with long list of distinguished service cross and the Croix de Guerre, Jack Curtin of Boston College and Melvin Carver, a former Rindge Tech athlete who recently had charge of the Somerville Southern Junior High baseball team, saw to it that Cambridge boys had plenty of instruction in athletics.

The playground program included folk dancing, games, reed and raphia work and athletic competitions. Leading activities were scheduled in squash ball and playground ball for the girls, and also senior, junior and sub-junior baseball for the boys.

There will be a demonstration of the work at the playgrounds at Russell Field, North Cambridge, on Wednesday afternoon, August 27, when the playground athletes will compete.

The various playgrounds and the teaching staffs assigned them are as follows:

PLAYGROUND STAFFS.

Gore School—Agnes Harington, teacher; Ethel Barry, assistant.

Thorndike School—Cyril Hines, master; Julia Sullivan, teacher; Bessie Higgins and Agnes Donnelly, assistants.

WELCOME SERVICE HEROES AT SOMERVILLE CHURCH

A welcome home patriotic service was held at St. James's Episcopal Church at West Somerville, in honor of the 52 young men of the parish who were in the service. The rector of the church, the Rev. Rollins of Marblehead, formerly chaplain of the 101st Infantry Regiment.

The full vested choir of the church, under the direction of William Anstey, with Stewart B. Smith at the organ, led in the singing of patriotic hymns and anthems. The church was decorated with the allied colors, and the service flag of the parish had a place over the pulpit.

FLEET TO GUARD BOTH OCEANS EQUALLY

Navy Department Denies Division Between Atlantic and Pacific Had Political Basis

Washington, July 7—High navy officials are amazed over reports from New York that some officers of the line were protesting against the division of the fleet and asserting that the division had been made purely for political purposes.

The New York report stated that as soon as Rear Admiral Rodman had been served all of the new dreadnoughts sent to the Pacific would be brought back to the Atlantic and that the Pacific fleet would be little augmented over its present strength.

These reports are resented at the Navy Department, which said that not one of the arguments against the division of the fleet was sound. The basis of the decision to make a division of the fleet is found first in the opinions of the celebrated authority, Captain Mahan.

Captain Mahan's idea was that the Atlantic fleet should be kept intact and the reason which he gave many that one-half of them would be equal to the navy of the expected enemy in the Pacific and the other half able to act successfully on the defensive against any enemy in the Atlantic.

The naval authorities here declare the assertion that the move to divide the fleet was political in its origin is without any foundation. The division plan was even urged during the Republican regime of Secretary of the Navy Meyer, but he declined to act on the ground that the conditions under which the division would be effective had not yet arrived.

British Prince Won't Visit Newport, Says London Paper

By International News Service.

London, June 15 (By Mail)—Under the heading, "Dollar Princesses," the Illustrated Sunday Herald prints the following:

"Those American mothers at Newport, Rhode Island, who are looking forward with eager anticipation to a visit from the handsome Prince of Wales in the August are likely to be severely disappointed, for there is very high authority to state that the prince has not the slightest intention of visiting Newport."

[illegible] and his advisers took up the matter and decided affirmatively to the idea of dividing the fleet. The reason that Great Britain might be an ally or a probable enemy did not enter into the calculations.

EXPERT'S HINTS ON FOOD FOR CHILDREN

Miss Gillett Says Spend More Money on Cereals, Milk and Fruit Than for Meats

Miss Lucy H. Gillett, Boston expert on diet for young children, has put forth the following suggestions for the division of money spent for food in order to provide the right kind of diet for the whole family and especially the children.

For every $10 spent for food there should be from

$2 to $3 spent for bread, cereals, rice, etc.

$2 to $3 for milk and cheese.

$1.70 to $2.75 for vegetables and fruit.

$1.70 to $2.20 for meat, fish and eggs.

$1.20 to $1.50 for other groceries, such as fat, sugar, cocoa, tea and coffee.

In families where there are young children:

The amount spent for meat should not be more than the amount spent for milk and cheese.

The amount spent for vegetables and fruit should be at least as much as the amount spent for meat.

The amount spent for bread and cereals should not be over one-third of the total food expenditure.

In several hundred families where the above suggestions have been followed, under-weight children have been brought up to normal, and frequently the mother has found that she spent $1 less a week per capita for food.

Boy Pirates Raid Bookstore for Sea Yarns

Three literary buccaneers pushed in a back window at Williams' book store in the glaring light of day and made off with loot.

All but Deadeye Dick, he was surrounded before getting out of the alley, and will probably be hung at the yard-arm sometime today for stealing an old discarded copy of "The Frozen Pirate."

They got six coverless, sun-faded volumes of varying degrees of educational value, five of which are still in probable possession of little old John Silver, who popped over a fence in company with nine-year-old Ben Gunn.

They weren't stealing anything about "sixteen men on a dead man's chest" when streaking past the Frog Pond, for the troops were after 'em. And the wind was swlingin out of their sails, so to speak.

But the government well knows their lair and they can't escape. Which is going to make the community feel a whole lot safer.

PASTOR WANTS ARMY KEPT ON THE RHINE

Every physician and dentist of Greater Boston of Irish blood and those who sympathize with the Irish cause will be urged to join in the movement to help Ireland achieve her independence.

Dr McCarthy, with John Morton of Dorchester, chairman of the advisory committee of the Irish Freedom Fund organization, has called a meeting of the physicians and dentists for tonight at 8:30 o'clock at the Boston City Club.

At this meeting the physicians and dentists will organize a permanent committee to conduct an organized campaign similar to that now maintained by the bench and bar committee of this organization.

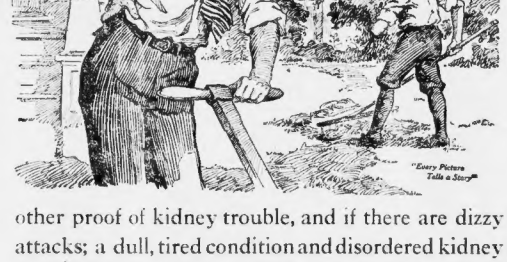
Get After That Backache



"Every Picture Tells a Story"

THOSE agonizing twinges across the small of the back, that dull, throbbing ache, may be your warning of serious kidney weakness—serious, if neglected, for it might easily lead to gravel, stone in kidney, bladder inflammation, dropsy or fatal Bright's disease. So if you are suffering with a bad back, look for other proof of kidney trouble, and if there are dizzy spells, headaches, nervous, despondent attacks; a dull, tired condition and disordered kidney action, get after the cause. Take things easier for a while and use Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that has been tried out for you by thousands. What satisfied users say is the best proof of Doan's reliability.

These Boston Users Say:

Emerson Street (S. Boston)

John M. Brewer, 270 Emerson St., So. Boston, says: "It has been a long time since I have had to use Doan's Kidney Pills, but I know how good they are. I use them for backache and stiffness over my kidneys with good results. Doan's have never failed to remove the backache or regulate my kidneys." (Statement given March 2, 1910.)

On March 15, 1915, Mr. Brewer said: "I have the same faith in Doan's Kidney Pills I always had, for they never fail to give the excellent relief. I recommend Doan's at every opportunity."

Paris Street (E. Boston)

Mrs. A. Lavery, 66 Paris St., East Boston, says: "I always recommend Doan's Kidney Pills when I hear anyone complain of kidney trouble. I know from experience that Doan's Kidney Pills are just as represented. I had backaches almost daily and felt dull and tired out. Frequent headaches and dizziness annoyed me and my kidneys acted irregularly. Three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills made my back well and strong and put my kidneys in good shape."

West Fourth Street

Patrick A. Eagan, 448 W. Fourth St., says: "My kidneys were in bad shape and my back ached continually. I could hardly do any stooping or lifting work, and nights I couldn't rest. Mornings I got up lame and sore and it was difficult for me to put my shoes on. My kidneys were too free in action, too. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they relieved the soreness and aching in my back and regulated my kidneys."

Webster Street (E. Boston)

Mrs. Joseph Holland, 248 Webster street, East Boston, says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills on several occasions when my kidneys have been disordered and they have always given me good benefit. Doan's drove all the pains from my back and immediately rid me of all symptoms of kidney trouble." (Statement given March 28, 1910.)

On March 13, 1915, Mrs. Holland said: "It is a pleasure to again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. I have used Doan's for backache and other kidney trouble, and they have always given me good results."

Shawmut Avenue

James Kelly, stone mason, 298 Shawmut Ave., says: "For a number of years I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills with excellent results. I think the hard work as a stone mason is what weakened my kidneys and caused attacks of kidney complaint. At times I could hardly get up or down because of the severe pains in the small of my back. I had to get up at night to void the kidney secretions, and the secretions were scanty and highly colored. I was subject to headaches and spells of dizziness, too. I always used Doan's Kidney Pills right away, and they removed the symptoms and I felt fine."

East Fifth Street (So. Boston)

Miss G. L. Nolan, 438 E. Fifth street, So. Boston, says: "Every time I caught cold it settled on my kidneys and put my kidneys out of order. At such times my back was lame and painful and I could scarcely get about the house. I felt tired to death, and the irregular action of my kidneys was most annoying. I suffered with headaches, too. I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Dale's Drug Store and they soon cured me of the attack."

DIRIGIBLE R-34 MAY SAIL OVER BOSTON ON HER RETURN VOYAGE

DAMAGED BY GALE, BUT SAVED BY EFFORTS OF 1,000 MEN

flying officers hovered over the ship after the accident.

"We must get out of here as soon as possible," continued Major Scott, "in the very latest," he said.

Major Scott was the first man to step on the dirigible after she reached terra firma. He and Major Herbert Usborne, British officer, were among the first to leave the ship.

The exit of the ship after a good night's sleep was a regular holiday, they expressed it, as Garden City reached the field at about 7 A.M. Automobiles were waiting for them, and it was planned to drive to New York. Most of them had never seen Broadway, and they were anxious to get a look at the town.

It was reported around the field at all times, and she was ready to cast off and climb to safety above the storm at a moment's notice.

Mechanicians under the foremen replacing the damaged handrail on the after gondola and making other repairs.

Major Scott, commander of the R-34, anticipates little trouble in the return trip.

MAY GO OVER BOSTON.

"We shall start just before daybreak Tuesday, if the weather favors," he said. "We must have westerly winds at our back most of the way and should make much better time than in crossing. We expect to be home again before Friday night."

The R-34 will sail down over New York city, presumably after the start, sailing over the metropolis for a few minutes before heading home. Requests have come from Boston, Philadelphia and other eastern cities for flights, but it is unlikely that the dirigible will pass over any of these towns, excepting possibly Boston, on the return trip.

It is probable that the British airship will pass over the heads of President Wilson and members of the peace conference party, returning home aboard the George Washington tomorrow forenoon. Two ships of the Washington will be approaching New York harbor as the R-34 sails out.

Shortly after daylight today a great storm of spectators began pouring into Mineola to catch a glimpse of the final Transatlantic make their way to the flying field in the early forenoon.

Brigadier-General Charlton, on behalf of the British Air Ministry, today sent the following message to Secretary of the Navy Daniels: "The air council desire to express their most cordial and grateful thanks for the co-operation and assistance the United States Navy rendered to His Majesty's airship R-34."

LANDING PICTURESQUE.

The landing of the air monster on Friday was picturesque scene. Her coming was in the nature of a surprise. Until dawn it had been understood that she was going to put into Montauk for coal in view of the strike, so not sent out. Some newspapermen were reported that she was heading for Montauk Point and hundreds of officers and men from the Mineola flying fields hurried there to make ready for her landing.

At 8 o'clock she was reported off Port Jefferson and at 9:30 her gray body appeared like a ghost in the cloud-flecked sky northeast of Roosevelt Field. Five minutes later she loomed over Mineola field like a leaden gray Wordsworth cloud floating through the air. Seven minutes and one-half over Roosevelt Field oscillating gently in the light southeast wind.

As the airship hovered over the field at an elevation of about 2,000 feet a dark object detached itself from the underbody and dashed earthward. It rapidly took the form of a parachute with a man clinging to it.

An ambulance dashed out from the side of the field and a surgeon and attendant were by the side of the man as he landed. The man who had made the leap was Major John Edward Maddock Pritchard, executive officer of the dirigible, a boyish looking officer still in the twenties and a veteran of the most prized of all British decorations—the Mons medal. He was unhurt and unruffled and greatly pleased at being the first trans-Atlantic air voyager to set foot on the soil of America.

"I just dropped down, you see," he said to the officers who ran out to meet him. "It's quite all right of course."

We gathered from the radio that Major Fuller, who was to take charge of the landing, had gone to Montauk Point thinking we would land there. So we thought it best to send a man familiar with landing down here to help things."

The docking engines of the dirigible were then shut off and ropes thrown over. These were caught by the men on the landing field and the aerial visitor settled down to a perfect landing. The mooring lines were made fast to the rings of the great concrete blocks sunk below the surface of the field and the members of the crew speedily scrambled down the ladders from the gondolas to the ground.

Major G. H. Scott, the commanding officer, was greeted by Rear Admiral Gleason, U. S. N., and Brigadier-General E. M. Charlton, Lieutenant-Commander Frederick W. Lucas and Major H. P. Davis, representing the Royal Air Force. Admiral Gleason read an official greeting from Secretary Daniels.

Major Scott and the other officers hurried away to the officers' headquarters in Mitchel Field and the men of the crew to the shower baths. All hands quickly got rid of their heavy flying togs—silk underwear, woollen jerseys and extra heavy woollen trousers which were rather uncomfortable in the torrid temperature here.

All hands soon reappeared in the natty forage hose uniform of the Royal Air Force and posed for their pictures. It was here that the first airship stowaway came to the fore. He was one W. W. Ballantine, who had smuggled himself aboard as one of the crew and managed to avoid discovery until the airship was six hours on her way. The stowaway was ordered out of the line-up for the picture and proceedings were halted until he was hustled away under arrest to be held for court-martial.

After the picture taking Major Pritchard hurried away to cable news of the safe arrival to the British air ministry. He also let it be known that he is the bearer of a letter from King George to President Wilson. This will be delivered to the President on his arrival at Hoboken tomorrow.

When asked for his impression of the trip, Major Pritchard said:

"Why, I'd say it was rather a dry trip so to speak. Of course when I say dry I mean not exciting—what else? We were quite good until we came in here.

"The R-34 is what I'd call a first-class ship, not uncomfortable at all though we went against head winds and through fog and all that I guess that covers it, eh, what?"

The dirigible is 639.5 feet long and measures 92 feet from the bottom of the middle gondola to the top of the envelope.

The big dirigible was in grave danger of instant demolition when an electric storm of great severity filled her officers and crew with the most lively apprehensions regarding her safety.

As the storm drew nearer before bursting lightning crackled about the imprisoned "blimp," which struggled at her anchored stays as if in real fear. The possibility of lightning striking the gas-inflated envelope and causing an explosion caused the instance of an order for the clearing of the field.

Large crowds of sightseers were forced far back. The only men who remained in proximity to the R-34 were her officers and crew and the 200 or more doughboys and their officers to whom was assigned the task of swinging the big blimp about so that her cigar-shaped nose would face the storm.

Refreshed by a bath some of the officers consented to speak briefly of the history-making voyage. Major G. Herbert Scott, commander of the airship, said:

"The voyage was a very enjoyable and most successful one. The total mileage was 3,200 miles and we covered that distance in 108 hours and 12 minutes. The thunder storms and squalls which we encountered on the way across caused the delay. I do not expect the return trip to take more than 70 hours.

"There was a crew of 30 men aboard and not one of them suffered any kind of illness. We were all in fine shape when we landed. But we had only gasoline enough to last three or four hours more and you can see we were very fortunate.

"When the stowaway was discovered, of course, we did not wish to drop him off so we put him to work and he did his share of the work on the voyage. He will not make the return trip, but will remain here and in the near future I expect he will be court-martialled. Still I do not think he will be subject to any severe punishment."

R-34 May Head Direct for Southern England on the Return Trip

London, July 7—The successful ending of the R-34's trans-Atlantic flight at Mineola dominated all other items of news in the London papers today, the papers devoting columns to descriptions of her battle with the storm Saturday night and her eventual landing.

The Air Ministry is considering instructing the R-34 to head for the south coast of England on her return and then pass the length of England on her flight to her base at East Fortune, soaring over London.

NEWSPAPERMAN WEDS ON VACATION IN MAINE

Friends of Mrs. Alice L. Abbott of No. 44 Dowdoin avenue, Dorchester, and Earle H. Noyes, a Boston newspaperman, were surprised to learn today that the couple had been married in Maine. The ceremony was performed in Portland by the Rev. Charles M. Sayward. Noyes was on his vacation. The couple spent their honeymoon in Maine.

Noyes, whose home is in East Greenwich, R. I., boarded at the home of Mrs. Abbott for nearly a year preceding the wedding. The couple slipped away quietly, and managed to keep their marriage a secret for some time. Mrs. Noyes was formerly a resident of Beverly.

WEST TOGUS TO REPLACE BABOOSIC AS SEA LINER

Because of the fact that the American steamer Baboosic, now nearing Portland, Me., will not be delivered to the Shipping Board in time for allocation to the Atlantic Transport Line this month, the board has assigned the steamer West Togus, a comparatively new vessel of 9,000 tons, to the line, to make the scheduled sailing from Boston to London on July 23. The Baboosic will make her first sailing for the company on August 22.

2000 STRIKE FOR RECOGNITION OF UNION

Leather Workers in Worcester Factory Also Demand a 48-Hour Week

Worcester, July 7—Two thousand workers employed by Greyton & Knight, manufacturers of leather belting, walked out at noon today following a refusal of the company to recognize their recently organized union.

The company, which is the largest manufacturer of leather belting in the world, refused to meet a committee from the union or to treat with it in any way.

The strikers are demanding a recognition of the union, time and one-half for overtime, a forty-eight-hour week and equal pay for both sexes engaged in the same work. Four hundred women are employed in the plant.

Following the walkout the strikers held a parade and a mass meeting.

MANSLAUGHTER CASE PUT OVER TILL FRIDAY

Nicholas Masino, eighteen, was charged with manslaughter in the East Boston Court today in causing the death of Emma Thomas, sixty years, of No. 221 Everett street, East Boston, on June 2. The case was continued till Friday. In trying to scatter a crowd of boys about his wagon, Masino raised a stick and hit the woman who, at his rear, was unseen by him. The blow caused death.

POLES DECLARE LOYALTY TO WILSON

Protest Against Treaty Provisions at Mass Meeting in Boston

Declaring their unswerving loyalty to President Wilson and their gratitude toward the United States for bringing the Polish cause before the tribunal of the world, the Polish national defence committee, in a capacity mass meeting in Franklin Union Hall, adopted resolutions protesting against those paragraphs in the treaty offered Poland by the Peace Conference which make them not "legislators for our own nation, but barbarians to be provided with ready-made laws."

The resolutions denounce the payment of a part of the Russian foreign loan. They say that this part of the treaty is inconsistent with the rights of oppressed nations.

RAISE $2,500 FOR LIBERALS.

President K. A. Zurawski presided. Telegrams of sympathy and encouragement were sent to President De Valera of the Irish Republic and greetings to President Pilsudski of Poland. The sum of $2,500 was raised during the three-day annual convention of the committee, which was terminated by the concluding meeting. This money will be sent to Poland for the furtherance of the liberal republican movement there.

Several speakers outlined the present situation, among them representatives of the State and city and leaders of the Polish cause in this country.

Dr. Alfred Fiderkiewicz, a local leader, welcomed the delegates and expressed the earnest wish of all Poles to support General Joseph Pilsudski, the President of the Polish Republic in all his undertakings. He was followed by Ludwig Mazurkiewicz, representative of the Polish Socialist ty.

Edwin McKnight, president of the Sou ssed in part: "The Americ ible have understood and sy ized with the Polish people ... their desire for independence. No one could better understand the aspirations of a country desiring to be free than the people living under a free government. We rejoice now with you in the birth of a new Polish nation.

"If justice has not been done Poland, justice should be done Poland and the country should demand it. No country better deserves fair play and the assurance of freedom than Poland."

WELCOMED BY WILSON.

Building Commissioner Herbert Wilson, representing Mayor Peters, welcomed the delegates to the city.

Dr. B. D. Kuskowski, editor of the official organ of the Polish National Defence Committee, paid a tribute to President Joseph Pilsudski. He declared him one of the great military leaders, and a consistent democrat.

Professor Thomas Sternberg, one of the most widely known leaders of the movement in this country, was enthusiastically greeted. In his talk he explained the liberal point of view toward Premier Ignace Paderewski and declared that "Paderewski became famous not through knowledge of politics or diplomacy but because he was the easiest tool for reactionaries to handle."

McNARY WINS APPLAUSE.

Commissioner William A. McNary elicited applause by his stand on Polish demands for a seacoast. He said, in part: "Americans naturally feel a deep sympathy for Poland and her cause because of the help they received from two of her foremost citizens—Kosciusko and Pulaski—in her hour of need. Poland has not had the treatment from the Allies that she deserves. She must have a coast line from the River Oder to the Semenen and from the Carpathian Mountains to the River Dniester. Poland deserves this consideration and there is no doubt that the present distribution can only lead to further troubles and should be corrected."

Mrs. Jeanne Kopacz, who has just returned from Poland, spoke of the terrible conditions and the scarcity of bread. In Austrian-Poland she was able to get a bread card only by threatening to bring her children's bodies to the commissary.

F. A. Daniel, representative from Cleveland and editor of the local Polish paper, presented a wire to Eamon de Valera which was greeted with vehement applause. A telegram to President Pilsudski also received an ovation. A resolution regarding the attitude of the Polish national defence committee toward the problems of Poland was unanimously adopted.

SHOW LEAVES MONKEYS BEHIND AT NORTH ADAMS

North Adams, July 7.—The Keystone Exhibition Shows, which have been exhibiting here for the past week, left for Hartford, Ct., leaving behind them two monkeys, from which Jerry, which escaped from one of the shows Tuesday. The monkeys evaded all efforts at capture, and as the last wagon pulled out of the lot they looked down on the scene nonchalantly.

The animals are of the common garden or hand-organ variety and are harmless, although they have shown a decided aversion to being shot up again. A number of boys climbed the trees where they have been making their abode during the week, but they been free, but the monks jumped from tree to tree, chattering gleefully and evading their would-be captors.

An officer of the Humane Society has been sent for, and he will try and devise some means of getting the animals back into captivity.

John Bull Cartoon "Is More Irish Than English"

London, July 7.—The people of Ireland look more like the accepted cartoons of John Bull than the English, according to Professor A. Keith, authority on ethnology. Generally speaking, he said, the heads of Irishmen were bigger than those of Englishmen.

Taking the people of the Island of Arranmore as typical of early Ireland, Professor Keith said one man shown to him as a typical Irishman was the double of John Bull which Punch portrays.

"The average Arranmore head was much larger than the average London head," said Professor Keith. "Now, as 5,000 years ago, the Arranmore Islander had to fight nature for a living. I wonder how many Londoners would manage to squeeze a living out of its soil."

GIRLS' CLOTHES A DISGRACE, SAYS MAID OF 80

North Brookfield, July 7.—Modern young women's gowns are the height of indecency and are worn only for the purpose of displaying shapely limbs, according to Miss Hazel Mason of South Main street.

"Morality never enters the heads of these light-headed girls," said Miss Mason, who admits to being past eighty, and declares that the odor she grows the more shocking sights she sees. She also took issue with the statement that country people are morally more pure than those of the cities.

"The flimsy material in the gowns worn by the young women of North Brookfield are enough to make their grandmothers turn in their graves," she said.

"Yes, I am past eighty," Miss Mason said, "and the older I get the more I wonder what this world is coming to. How mothers let their daughters dress as they do, I can't understand.

"I see them every day, young girls and girls old enough to know better, tripping along the street so scantily clad that it is a wonder to me that they don't catch their death colds.

"Now if a young woman does not own several pairs of silk stockings her wardrobe is not complete. There were no wardrobes in my day, and for silk stockings, I never knew what they were. We had to wear warm woolen ones, and were glad to get them, but do you see them on the girls of today? It often looks to me as if they wore no stockings at all.

"The girls of today dress for comfort, and their greatest ambition is to display their shapely limbs. Shoes that pinch their feet, and with heels so high that they are unable to walk is their idea of fine dressing.

"It is a shame and a disgrace the way the young women of today clothe themselves. Dressmaking talk ing about how much it costs to dress nowadays, but judging from the amount they wear, their clothing bills should be very low.

"I am old and gone by," as some might say, "and they tell me this is the twentieth century and that I don't understand the girls of today. As old as I am, I know there is a law of decency and self-respect.

"When we were young we had our good times and attended parties, but they were far different from what the young people of North Brookfield attend now. Those were the days when we wore calico dresses and wore home-made goods.

"The girls of today are the women of tomorrow, and is it any wonder that the young girls try to follow the example set by their older sisters.

"Transparent gowns are not the most proper article of dress, in my opinion; silk stockings are a need less extravagance and high-heel shoes shorten a girl's life by years.

"It makes me sorrowful to think of it, as I see these girls pass by, the mothers of the future, acting as they do. Would that they could look back and see their ancestors.

"Morality never enters the minds of these light-headed girls, and the dress and action of the girl of today make us old people blush with shame."

DEMOBILIZING HASTENED AT DEVENS

10,000 Soldiers Recently Arrived Are Mustered Out of Army

Camp Devens, Ayer, July 7.—Work of demobilizing the 10,000 soldiers who arrived here Saturday and Sunday started today to make room for others expected the latter part of the week. Field clerks and officials in the demobilization group in the artillery area and the men in charge of the sanitary process machine had their hands full looking after the necessary detail routine.

Plenty of cars are available for the transfer of men to other camps. Approximately 955 colored soldiers will be sent in special trains to points in Texas and South Carolina. The men are connected with the 554th Engineers and saw active service in Argonne Forest. All are glad to be back in the States and have nothing but praise for the white officers who commanded them. They left America for France last July. Many contemplate reenlisting.

Everything was hustle and bustle in camp and jitney drivers did a thriving business. Men awaiting their turn to go to the sanitary process machine to have their uniforms cleansed watched the manoeuvres of the students of the Reserve Officers' Training School on the main drill field. Several baseball games were played in various parts of the camp. Others enjoyed a dip in Hell Pond and took part in a number of impromptu swimming races.

All class 'C' reserve officers, those who have been here since the camp opened and those who arrived from Plattsburg last July, are getting ready to leave the service. These men are much chagrined to think that they cannot remain in the army. They are obsessed with military life and thoughts of confinement indoors are causing some much uneasiness.

"Everything has an ending and though we did not get a chance to prove our worth in battle it will be a fine hard-earned one of us to forego the pleasant duties we've had in the army," said a lieutenant at canton-ment headquarters. "I dread spending the years to come in a counting room. We expect to don our civilian clothes by September 15 at the latest. This due to the decision of the War Department that none but regular army officers will be retained in the service."

PROVOST GUARD HAS HOPES.

The decision of the War Department to retire these officers has given encouragement to men of the Provost Guard, who fear that they will also be released from their burdensome duties here by Sept. 15. There are a number of these men who many of whom have for the past two months been writing letters to newspapers and influential friends to get them out of the service.

Plain clothes men have been placed at Whalom Park to keep tabs on officers and soldiers who frequent these resorts. Complaint was made recently that the actions of some soldiers were contrary to military regulations.

As a result of four accidents at the Methuenville bridge, near the west gate, it is possible that the military authorities will ask the state to have the town of Shirley place a police officer there Sundays and holidays to regulate traffic. An effort will be made today to "fish out" the machine from the Nashua River at the point. Four Worcester young women were in the machine when it broke through the bridge fencing and dropped fifteen feet into the water.

The town fathers in Ayer are expecting to meet this week to take action on the matter of selling a plot of land to the federal government.

VACATION SCHOOL OPENS WITH 150

The Morgan Memorial daily vacation school opened in Hanover street today with an enrollment of close to 200 children, under the direction of Harriet O. Marsh. A large corps of instructors will conduct classes in many kinds of industrial and book work.

At 9 o'clock 150 children selected for the summer session of the institution conducted at South Athol left headquarters in the South End by motor trucks. They will take up their freedom of 600 acres for two months and will be under the direct charge of Wellington C. Paler.

Minister in Verse Praises Women for Prohibition

Mentioning that the realization of prohibition in everybody's mouth, the Rev. William W. Bliss of the First Presbyterian Church, Brookline, paid tribute to the women's vote in verse as follows:

Mary had a little vote,
And whatever State she'd
And whatever she got on
Mr. Bliss said victory belongs to the women, to the doctors of the country, to the business men and to soldiers which have forfeited their admission if they were habitual drinkers.

FREED NURSE EATS BUT LITTLE

Shock of New Arrest May Have Bad Effects, Physicians Fear

Lawrence, July 7.—Mrs. Bessie May (Jessie) Lundgren, who was acquitted on the charge of murdering Mrs. Florence W. Kay, has eaten practically nothing since the verdict was returned, following which she suffered a severe collapse. It is feared that weeks will elapse before the nurse, who is also indicted for the murder of her brother, Alberg J. H. Wilkins, will be able to stand the shock of another arrest.

Although it appears that the authorities of Hudson County, N. J., will insist on pressing the case against Mrs. Lundgren, following up the indictment returned in that county last September by the grand jury with a trial similar to the one just closed, her counsel, Daniel J. Daley, is waging a hard battle to have the case nol-prossed, owing to her condition.

MAY REMAIN IN ANDOVER.

It is probable that Mrs. Lundgren will be allowed to remain at home in Andover until the convening of court at Hudson County next September by the grand jury with a trial similar to the one just closed, her counsel, Daniel J. Daley, is waging a hard battle to have the case nol-prossed, owing to her condition.

WILL FIGHT EXTRADITION.

Discussing the New Jersey indictment, Mr. Lundgren states that he and his wife have implicit confidence in Counsel Daley's ability and that the outcome is sure to be the freedom of Mrs. Lundgren. The New Jersey authorities claim he had advance knowledge regarding the alleged poisoning of Mrs. Lundgren's brother to warrant immediate prosecution of the case. Attorney Daley will appear before the Governor of New Jersey today to issue the fight against her extradition to New Jersey.

If the case goes to trial in New Jersey it will cost that State more than it cost Massachusetts, owing to the transportation of important witnesses and experts. The expense of the jury alone in this county was something over $5,000. The jury was engaged twenty-five days in the recent trial. Sheriff's aides cost the county $1,500, and medical experts who were paid at the rate of $50 per day ran the trial bill up in the thousands. It is estimated that the total cost was nearly $50,000.

WILLARD QUIT ONLY WHEN NATURE FORCED HIM TO QUIT

By Tad.

Jess Willard will go down in history as the only heavyweight champion who quit in a battle.

He did quit, of course, but he quit only when he could go no further. No champion ever took a pasting such as he took. Pat Nelson had just such a time when he fought Wolgast and fought on until he was stopped by the referee. Carl Morris had just such a face when he fought Jim Flynn here, and he went the limit, but they didn't hit that hot canvas seven times in a row and get up.

Jeffries, when he was very much worsted up prior to his second fight with Fitzsimmons, put he was never on his feet.

You must remember that Willard was knocked down hard every time he took the count. He never once dropped to his knees and took it. He took everything he met Dempsey had and then fought two rounds more before he quit.

No one wanted to see any more of that fight than that Dempsey couldn't come after the third round.

Willard was tired, weak and unable to defend himself, but he could have been killed any moment by the referee for stopping it in the third round.

Willard quit when nature quit him. He told out that as long as he could stand on his feet he would keep on, and that is the nothing that he did in that first round. He was through for good in the second is a quitter.

JESS GAME, SAYS MONAHAN.

You can tell Jess Willard so, Walter Monahan that Jess Willard is not low. Monahan, fresh from camp, coming on from Toledo yesterday, tried to tell Monahan this and set an awful time.

"Now you Hannah piped Monahan, sticking out his thick fist under the nose of Jess Willard, "you're no-one-cents in the mess Willard has. You must admit he is a game boy."

Monahan looked down over the defeat of Willard, although he attempted to look pleased when they hit her.

"Poor fellow," said Monahan, "he was licked with that first punch, but did did not know it. He thought it was the last thing he got such a blow once. He thought that Jack Dempsey was connecting for that. Gee, he was dumb like that."

"What was that you were going to say?" said Monahan, when Willard came to at the end of the first round. He said to me:

"What's that is like this we save him the ice water and the smelling salts and don't start in the second round. He went out for the second round. When he got back from the third round he was wide awake.

"He asked me: 'What's up?' Is the fight still on?' When I told him it was it is true. He was game. We all knew it. We held a consultation and decided to throw up the sponge but Willard didn't tell me to throw it up.

"Next morning, after the fight, Mrs. Willard was upstairs while we were having breakfast. Jess was at the table partaking of ham steak and potatoes. He called over to me and inquired if I had seen Mrs. Willard that day. My wife thinks I'm a rotten fighter. Well, I know now it feels to lose both. It cost me a pair of fellow bone with a black eye and finally I drew a prize on myself."

DEMPSEY STANDS ALONE.

There isn't a heavyweight in Europe or America who has a chance with Dempsey now. Fred Fulton is the best slow of the entire lot, even figure what the odds would be.

The chances are that Fred would be found knocked out a few minutes after the bell sounded, as he was at Harrison, New Jersey.

Willard is the only man who ever held the heavyweight title in America who wasn't knocked out when he lost the title. He never took a count for the count in his life.

The challenger was lucky again on a holiday. Last week we had a list of challengers who had won titles on holidays and it is now swelled by one more.

They want to know now whether Dempsey could have beaten Jeffries at his best. That's a question that has been discussed by beaten every heavyweight champion and American fan among those with a lot of conceit.

Jeffries, to be sure, had a lot of "back-to-the-wall" fighting, but he could handle his hands when Jeff wished him to and the knockout Fitz was mostly out and Ruhlin was more than a match for Jeffries when they were both at their best. Jeffries went down and out when he was through. He never took for the count in his life.

HITS LIKE RATCHET, BID.

Ketchel and Moloney used to hit like Dempsey. They threw everything they had into their punches, putting forward all weight and pounds behind every punch. He has no jabs in his gameup.

The Willard man made a sweet night. They say that if Jess had stayed on the floor for the count of ten Johnny Willard might have been among the missing. Willard has been among many a missing. Look at Young Corbett and Stanley, Bill Squires and Tommy Ryan, Jeffries and Fitz.

Well, there are any number of them.

Dempsey was laughing after the first punch he landed on Willard.

"I kept saying 'now?' to myself. I kept it way down even with Willard's belt. He had to sag down to land at me, and of course, that brought his head way down. After he had two or three of them I figured that one left from the floor and caught him right on the button. He thought I was trying to duck under, I wanted to jump with the punch. I wanted to have a lot behind it, and I did."

LYNCH MUST GO SOME TO BEAT JOSEPHS

Fenway A. A. Selections

Joe Lynch to beat Bobby Josephs.

Billy Duffy to beat Young Gwill.

Mack Murphy to beat Burt Jones.

Frank Tillo to beat Young Cahill.

By JACK CONWAY.

Joe Lynch of New York will be obliged to perform as his best to avoid defeat at the hands of Bobby Josephs, South End featherweight, whom he is booked to meet in a ten-round bout at the Fenway A. A. tonight.

Josephs is one of those 118-122-pound Jack Dempseys. He is always forcing the issue and when he comes with either a left hook or a right hand smash his opponent starts dodging bullets and such things.

The South End lad is only nineteen years of age, but yet has proved he is one of the best featherweights in New England. His victory over Chick Hayes of Indianapolis had all the marks of a regular blue-ribbon bout.

A CLASSY PERFORMER.

Lynch will give Josephs harder opposition than he received from Hayes. The New Yorker is one of the world's classiest performers at 122 pounds.

Lynch recently returned from England. While overseas he engaged in a brilliant twenty-round contest with Jimmy Wilde, celebrated English bantamweight champion, and he knocked out Kid Williams, outscored Pal Moore of Memphis, Dick Loadman, Frankie Burns, Kid Herman, Terry Martin and a flock of high class men. Lynch believes he is Wilde's master and asserts that if the British star will meet him in an American ring the result of their battle in London will be reversed.

ASPIRES TO TITLE.

As Johnny Kilbane cannot hope to retain the featherweight crown forever, Lynch is of the opinion he is the young man to burst into the Hall of Champions.

Billy Duffy of Everett will oppose Young Quill of Brockton in the semi-final contest of eight rounds.

Young Cahill will own more battle Frank Tillo in a six-round frolic, while Mack Murphy will display his ringcraft acainst that of Burt

EATON IS AFTER TITLE HELD BY KRAMER

Bike fans, especially those who follow the sport end of the game will be surprised to learn that Frank Kramer, the grand old man of the wheel sport, is again threatened with the loss of the throne which he has held for some eighteen years with only one break.

This new owner-to-be rival — is Raymond Eaton, a rider well known from coast to coast but never regarded as champion although always a dangerous rider. Boston fans know Eaton, as he has appeared here several times at Revere and in the six-day races.

The total points to date finds Kramer and Eaton going neck-and-neck, and with the season more than half over, and the champion will have to be at his very best to land top honors.

The line of the sprinters is going to Revere a visit this week, and a number of followers of the game will journey thither to see him against Frank Chatterton, who is also returning to take on with the leading pair. Soon up as dangerous as does Eaton.

AMATEUR BASEBALL

The Revere team, which is made up of former high school and Legion players has started the season with a record of nine wins and no defeats. The team has played many games with some of the semi-pro teams in this vicinity, Maiden Boys, Wakefield, Malden, Winthrop, Marblehead, Saugus and Lynn. Manager Ryan has been very busy the past week booking games for the coming season. Games have been secured by the Revere team with the following teams: Manager of St. Mark's Catholic Club of Dorchester will please call Chemists of Medford are preferred. Manager of St. Mark's Catholic Club, Dorchester Center.

Games are wanted for the Dorchester Independents for next Sunday. Manager of Leach, phone Dorchester 2261, between 7 and 8 p. m.

A challenge is issued to any sixteen-year-old team for the Cedar C. of Revere. Members of Medford, Somerville, Belmont and the Malden are preferred. Manager A. L. Terry, 95 Beaumont avenue, Revere.

The Hydes, A. A. of Chelsea would like to hear from the Boston Tigers, St. John's, Lynn Wilson Wakefield and the Wolves Town teams. Manager Fred Carey, No. 102 Chestnut street, Chelsea.

DEMPSEY TO BOX FOR WOUNDED SOLDIERS

New York, June7—The Knights of Columbus, through the efforts of Jimmy Twyford, the popular K. of C. secretary, who organized the series of boxing shows now being given for the wounded soldiers in and about New York, has secured the promise of Heavyweight Champion Jack Dempsey to appear at a monster boxing carnival to be held in August at Madison Square Garden.

Twyford interviewed Dempsey before the fight. In telling of his meeting with the new champion, he said:

"I went to Dempsey and told him that I would like to have him box for the wounded soldiers at Madison Square Garden. He said he would, but smilingly remarked: 'Perhaps you won't want me after the fight.'

"Never mind that. I know who is going to win, so that doesn't worry me,' I replied.

"'I am glad to hear you say that,' shot back Jack. 'I'll finish the big fellow in no time, and then I'll give my services free to the wounded boys any time they want them.'"

LONG BRANCH PREPARES TO WELCOME DEMPSEY

Long Branch, N. J., July 7—A rousing welcome awaits the new heavyweight champion, Jack Dempsey, here. It is expected that Dempsey will make his home here, where he did considerable training for his bout with Willard. He is a member of the Elks lodge of this place.

Chief of Police William D. Watling has been selected to head a reception committee which will welcome back to Long Branch the new champion, his manager, Jack Kearns, and his trainer, Jimmy De Forest, of this city.

The committee will be composed mainly of Long Branch Elks, business men and various local organizations, and nothing will be left undone to make the welcome to Dempsey, Kearns and De Forest one of the greatest in the history of the city.

TWENTY-FIVE RACES ON NORTH RANDALL TRACK

Cleveland, July 7—Eight races for pacers and seventeen for trotters are carded on the card of the Grand Circuit, which opens its 1919 season on the North Randall track tomorrow.

CHISOX MADE WINNER BY GLEASON

Chicago, July 7—"Kid" Gleason, hard-fisted little manager of the White Sox, has injected new life and pepper into the "South Siders."

The peppery "Kid" has a way about him that is distinctly his own when it comes to handling men—a way that wins the respect and confidence of every member of his aggregation from the greenest recruit to the oldest regular.

The White Sox, as Gleason took hold of them prior to the opening of the 1919 season, were a doubtful looking combination. Fans and critics who were on the inside of affairs as they pertained to the Sox entertained well-grounded "hunches" that they were divided against themselves.

Fact is, there was at one time not long ago two factions in the Sox camp. The wiseacres whispered that these factions were the Rowland and Collins factions, and the Sox machine failed to hit on all six cylinders as a result.

When Gleason stepped into Rowland's shoes as manager of the Sox it was up to him to smooth out all the wrinkles and make a new start. That he has succeeded is evidenced by the percentage column, which shows plainer than anything else what kind of results he is getting.

And yet Gleason is a driving manager. Like Fred Mitchell, his capable rival on the West Side, he demands the very last ounce of ability from every player at all times when the club is on the field. And he gets it.

Gleason was brought up in the old school. When he was a young player, striving to win his spurs, it was the custom of managers to take heroic measures to get results.

Gleason will take on anybody from the big boss to Company himself if he thinks he is right.

HAGEN AND BRADY PLAY SENSATIONAL GOLF

New London, Ct., July 7—Sensational golf marked the play of Walter Hagen, open champion, and Mike Brady, runner-up, when, playing as a team, they defeated Alex Smith and Gil Nichols on the Shennecossett links here, 3 and 2.

SAND LOT STARS

SAM BROCK,
HILTON A. C. OF DORCHESTER, PITCHER AND OUTFIELDER.

Sam Brock has been doing the twirling for the Hilton Club this year and plays in the outfield when not in the box. Brock formerly went to English, where he ran on the track team. The Hiltons have a fast amateur team that plays in the 19-year class, although they average only 17 years. The Hiltons went through the season last year winning almost all their games.

Hall Leads Golfers

Rockport, July 7—George Hall, with a card of 94-73, led in the qualifying round for the Director's Cup at the Rockport Country Club. Nine others turned in cards.

LEWISTON CLUB DROPS OUT OF N. E. LEAGUE

Lewiston, Me., July 7.—"Hill" Carrigan, one-time leader of the world champion Red Sox, has quit baseball once more. This time it is the executive end of the game. With his partners, Albert Hyslop of Portsmouth, N. H., and William P. Gray of this city, he has voluntarily vacated the franchise of the Lewiston Club.

Dissatisfaction at the way the New England League was being conducted is alleged to be the cause of dropping the franchise. It is doubtful if the game scheduled for today with the Haverhill club will be played, as Manager Parent and several of the players have left town.

FRED MITCHELL QUITS AS PRESIDENT OF CUBS

Chicago, July 7.—Fred Mitchell has resigned the presidency of the Chicago National Baseball Club. In his letter to the club's directors, Mitchell stated he wished to be free to give his whole attention to managing the Cubs. William L. Veeck, vice-president of the club, succeeds Mitchell as executive head.

ANNISQUAM YACHT CLUB HOLDS REGATTA

Gloucester, July 7.—Morrill Wiggin's Norah led the 16-footers in the result of the Annisquam Yacht Club's July 4 races. Other winners were C. Gasbo's Rose-wan in the 40-foot class, Jack Hooper's Tern in the bird class and Scat, owned by Winsor Gale, in the catboats. Twenty-one boats competed.

CUBS MOST LIKELY LOOKING TEAM IN NATIONAL RACE

By HUGH S. FULLERTON

Those Chicago Cubs are pressing forward steadily and seemingly resistlessly despite their well-known weakness in attack and their hard luck in having players injured. The next fortnight will tell a lot, for unless the Giants can make a stand on their home grounds and repel the Cubs as they have done thus far this season, the superb pitching staff of the Chicago team certainly will wear them down.

The Giants have whipped the Chicagoans eight seven out of eight games, thus far this season, and they own their hold on the lead entirely to repulsing a team which figured to beat them in the majority of games in their series. The Giants were fortunate in the first series in getting a crack at Mitchell's team when it was not going well and when the pitching staff was out of shape, especially Tyler, who figures to be very effective against Mcitraw a team.

Tyler is not yet in shape. He worked one good game, but the second time he tried out his arm it went floosy early and he was driven off the slab, or else he'd have taken out just in time to save a game for the Chicago outfit.

The hard luck of the Cubs continues. Hollocher was just returning to the game after weeks of retirement because of a damaged digit when a line drive smashed him in the face, knocked him cold for fifteen minutes and forced his second retirement. Killefer is not yet right and without Killefer the Cubs' catching staff does not look good. If the team, however, can go along and make gains in that crippled condition what will it do when it gets right.

The Giants have not shown even a sign of wavering. True they have lost ground, but they show no signs of a slump and the outfield work continues to give their the edge on all opponents.

Remember along in March I told you folks that this St. Louis Brown team was a whale if it could only get some pitching? The team figures to be the fastest team on the bases in the country, and although rather erratic in spots is consistent enough to win a championship if it had consistent pitching.

Allan Sothoron ought to be a great pitcher and, at times, looks as if he would be one, but just at those times he generally slumps. Wellman scarcely has sufficient strength to rate as a regular on days when he feels right this slim southpaw can bend them across from any angle. Koob is another one of those "ought-to-be" boys who flashes for a brief interval, then slumps again. Shocker is a magnificent pitcher against some clubs.

Ollie Pecord, referee of the large fines at Toledo, used to be a ball player and when he was with Mobile he promised to become a big leaguer. Something slipped and Ollie, after being laid for by several big league teams, went back and, although he later played with Rockford and with Toledo, he never again threatened to break into the majors.

It is a good thing for Ollie that so few remember his ball playing days, even in the Southern league they still vew that Ollie and Tom Slattery were the worst umpire riders that ever wore spiked shoes, which is saying a lot.

He held to the common ball player belief that all umps are robbers and that he one working on that particular day is especially so. He has a good yarn on one ump.

"We were playing some Spring training games down in Illinois one spring, he says, "and in every town we got into there was a high sky, a head wind and a home umpire, so those bush league boys kept beating us and the word was going back home that we were worse than usual. We ran into one at Boardstown. I think, who took a game away from us because every time our pitcher was in trouble the ump would yell: 'Ill-legal delivery,' and send the runners on around the bases. We never waited for hits to bring home the runs.

"What made us sore and the next town we struck we insisted that a fair ump be appointed. So they trotted out the superintendent of schools who insisted that he was honest and that he knew the rules although he had not played the game. It developed later that he had spent the night studying the rules and committing them to memory.

"Early in the game one of their batters hit the ball down to our pitcher. The pitcher grabbed it, trotted toward first base and, seeing that the runner was not running or making an effort to beat the hit, he tossed the ball underhanded to the first baseman, thirty feet ahead of the runner. 'Safe,' yelled the school master.

"What?' we all yelled at once, rushing at him.

"The batter is safe. The rules say so.'

"What rules?'

"You professionals can't fool me,' he said, "I read the rules last night. The rules say the ball must be thrown to the first baseman ahead of the runner.'

"Well, the ball was there forty feet ahead of him,' I yelled.

"Conceded,' he replied, "but your pitcher tossed the ball and the rules say it must be thrown."

FUTURE BABE RUTHS, HERE'S CHANCE TO GET HOMER

The amateur nines are now coming in for their innings with the college and school baseball seasons ended. The American, as usual, is the headquarters of the sand lot stars.

Special attention is to be given to the youngsters who are not more than fifteen years of age. Managers of captains of outfits ranging in age from nine to fifteen are asked to send in their individual pictures, names and stories about their teams to the Sporting Editor, Boston American, No. 80 Summer street.

Future Babe Ruths, get busy!

How to Play Baseball

THIS is the thirty-seventh of a series of 100 articles by Hugh S. Fullerton, celebrated baseball expert, on "How to Play Baseball." In this lesson Mr. Fullerton tells how to become a pitcher. These articles will be a feature of the American's sport pages each day. Don't miss them.

Almost all baseball players make their start either as pitchers or as catchers. This is natural because in playing "catch" two boys will work together, the one who is the best at catching will be the catcher and the one with the strong arm will develop as a pitcher.

The fact that so few come follows reason in the pitching department is due largely to ignorance of care of the arm and after short time the pitcher, who might have become great, develops pain and retires to other positions.

The care of the arm is the first essential. The other cause of arm injury is by lack of warming up before throwing the ball in full force. The boy who aspires to be a pitcher should practice throwing with a full, round arm, overhand swing, with the shoulder and body moving with the arm.

He should practice so as to swing his body and take one forward step with the muscles of arm, shoulder and back moving in harmony, and should avoid entirely the snapping of the wrist, especially in practicing curve pitching.

The pitcher should start slowly, merely tossing the ball with a full sweeping overhand motion until the arm muscles are loosened, and even then the practice of throwing as hard as possible is not advisable.

The pitcher should remember that speed comes with good pitching. The temptation of the young pitcher, of course, is to throw as hard as possible whenever the opposing team threatens to score and the majority of lame arms come from this practice.

Remember that speed is a strain upon the arm and that curve pitching is a greater strain. The pitcher should save his speed and curves as much as possible and use them only in emergencies. The less frequently a curve is used the more effective it is when it is used. The pitcher must study to save his arm and to keep it in condition at all times and must realize that it is the reserve force saved during a game that wins in the close finishes.

The care of the arm is vital. Young pitchers should avoid, as far as possible, the use of massage of the arm muscles. After a game the arm should be rubbed lightly enough to warm the muscles, but never should be massaged hard. Light use of a vibrator is beneficial. But remember that a surface rub to prevent stiffness and a warm covering to prevent cold lengthens the life of the arm. Hard massage tends to make muscles stiff and to overtrain them.

FIGHT RECEIPTS WILL TOTAL OVER $500,000

Toledo, Ohio, July 7.—With the official accounting still uncompleted, Tex Rickard, promoter of the heavyweight championship contest between Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey, estimated this time receipts would total between $500,000 and $600,000.

Revenue agents are assisting in checking up the receipts to determine the amount of war tax due the government. Taking the receipts on $500,000, the government will receive approximately $50,000, while approximately $42,000 will be turned over to Toledo's charities.

CORBETT'S COLUMN

Great fighters usually are born—not made.

Every outstanding ringman of all time—except Jess Willard—has been the one who began battling in his kid days and jumped into the professional ranks just about as soon as he emerged from his teens.

Willard was the only manufactured fighter who climbed his way to a championship. But Jack Kearns, who manages Dempsey, has this to say about Willard:

Jess isn't a real fighter—and never was. He's been lucky—that's why he became champion. Fate ruled that he was to get a chance at Jack Johnson just when the negro was all gone. Anybody could have licked Johnson that day in Havana.

Jess never had a boxing glove on his hand in his life until seven years or so ago. He knew nothing about the art of fisticuffs—and cared nothing.

Working and laboring on a ranch suited him, but Jess saw Carl Morris—big, lumbering Morris—in action one night and decided that if Morris could get easy money that way he could do likewise.

JESS MADE GOOD START.

And Jess, around the age of thirty-two, when 90 per cent of the fighters are through, started on his career.

It took a long time to develop Willard. Months and years of patience with him were necessary. He didn't school easily—didn't take to fighting like the natural born warrior. But he learned his trade just the same, and today he is ex-heavyweight champion of the world—a point that a thousand warriors have tried to reach since Jeffries was dethroned. Only Willard, the manufactured ringman, has achieved that pinnacle.

It's true what Kearns says about natural born fighters being the greatest. Tommy Burns was a battler almost from his start in the ring. Tommy was game, that type. And Kearns is right in saying that nothing stood in his way within Dempsey that his sixth sense as a fighter tells him just what to expect and not be disturbed at critical moments.

BRAVES SHOW OLD-TIME FORM

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 7.—Showing the speed that successfully carried the British dirigible R-34 across the Atlantic, the Boston Braves succeeded in handing the fifth and last game of the series from Brooklyn, 4 to 2, this afternoon. It was a comeback game for the visitors but still short by two runs.

Barnes, idol of the softball pitchers, was sent to the rubber by Manager Robinson but the Braves made him look like a veteran of the box before the big show. Six hits, one a double, an error and two bases on balls accounted for the Braves' total of runs in the opening stanza.

With Mamaux, Grimes was replaced by Al Mamaux in the fifth and Brooklyn's attack until the seventh, when a two-bagger went in for him.

Rixey, the first man to face Grimes, went out on a fly to Wheat and then the Brooklyn starter, Hawkins, bounced a single to left in the fashion once in an inning. And for years afterward Jeff was incredible.

Pitchmonger, Mallay, Maher, Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, Tommy Ryan, Bruno Frank, Dal Hawkins, Jack McAuliffe, Dennis Dixon, Peter Jackson, Charlie Mitchell and all the other truly greats of the ring were natural fighters.

They started swinging their fists in childhood and even the curbing influence of the years could not take from them their love for battling. They were fighters—from the beginning to the end.

Dempsey, the new champion, is that type. And Kearns is right in saying that nothing stood in his way within Dempsey that his sixth sense as a fighter tells him just what to expect and not be disturbed at critical moments.

Look Out for Mercury

IT is an interesting thing to see the planet Mercury at least once in a lifetime. The great astronomer Copernicus, it is said, never succeeded in seeing it because he lived in a region where the horizon was too foggy. Mercury is now visible soon after sundown only a few degrees above the horizon, about twenty degrees south of the sunset point.

STIRRING TALE OF HUNT FOR PIRATES' GOLD

Young New York Millionaire, Lured by Tales of a Central American Adventurer, Sets Sail on a Most Thrilling Cruise

The theme of this story was suggested to the author by Charles W. Goddard

ALTHOUGH it remained hidden and undiscovered in the bowels of repose behind its placid Poon metaphysical set up, the Solanos were persons of taste and wealth. Their forbears could have murdered some of theirs and indeed a select few had.

"Beast!" Ying Solanos hissed. Animal of the most contemptible climbed in the bag. "Because I am kind do you presume to be imbecile? Do you suppose I don't know what that means? And now will you sleep with the worms of death, but never for me. Not while I live will you be the lesser of living as you starve upon the boulders that line the shore. Up, you pig, you dog, you carrion! Up, I say!"

"There is never any medicine in San Juan for to-day I need it so," pled Yi Poon, backing in the dark. His head struck a rock.

"You thousand useless big name!" said Yi Poon, hesitating to make up his mind to run. "You thousand devil's son, you! Where is the gold?" he shouted in the direction of the silent son. "Answer, your witness!" he added.

Ana Yi Poon, calling softly down the trail into the earthberry, evaded the pulque-ravaged moon, a shadow that moved about with the ghost and loitered up the steps.

At the same time, on the edge of Ying's rancho mounted men, wearing the sombreros and the gendarmes Rafael, Jimenez, Augustino and Vincente, Ramon and Alvarado, with their mules and mules and mules and mules, waited the command of Jefe to depart on their long journey to the Caribbean. What they did not know was that a shadow that was mellow and liquid, and true to the old tradition of the land, was the soothing of the mules and the filing of fountains of pulque.

"We are ready, Excellency," said in grandiloquent Spanish the clinking the colonel within the two whined and commented on the fountains of pulque. "We are ready, you and I, old man, and we will sit here and tell each other stories of brave men and women and life and love, and anger and sudden death, the rage red in the eyes, and if that bottle cold in the well, and if you tell me what reason has that soul you drink pulque for that ends not out with it, but that is not to be drowned in it but in the pulque. You like one drop now, now, soon, very quick?"

A Momentous Night

The night, with the Jefe Ramon and Torres separated by their station under the stars, the one destined to be a millionaire and the Solano hacienda, things began to happen, early dinner over, smoking the fragrant cigarettes, the flaming Jefe Henry was accosted and, by virtue of his hospitality, he had to set on the wide front veranda. Through the windows of the steps, they saw a strange figure approach.

"It is like a ghost," said Alvarado Solano.

"A evil ghost! Martinez, the twin brother ascended.

"A Christ ghost you couldn't know your finger from," Jefe Henry laughed.

"The very thing who saved Leonida and me from the flood," said Henry Morgan. "The seller of secrets." Leonida gurgled. "He of he hasn't brought a new secret I think is unsupposed."

"What do you want, Cubanian?" Alexandro, the eldest of the Solano brothers, demanded angrily.

"Also new secret very new new secret matter," said Yi Poon unabashed. "Your secrets are too expensive, Cubanian," said Henry, interrupting.

"Your secrets are very expensive, Yi Poon answered with some pleasure. "Yi Poon secrets are cheap."

Torres and Rocio ordered. "I have not a long time to do the job of death I can in ever to Jefe Ramon," he said.

But Yi Poon was master persuasion.

Leaving the young people to talk over the old Cuban and the old Cuban to his fate, Yi Poon crept to the front of the house and, keeping in the shadow of the vines, he came to the front door. Then he arrived breathless at the hacienda. Not content with knocking at the door he beat upon it with his fists and feet and roared to his Chinese gods that no one could hear. Then he shot at him before he could explain the urgency of his errand.

"Ah, go to hell," Alexandro said, when he had opened the door and flashed a light on the face of the importunate caller.

"I have a secret," Yi Poon panted. "Very big brand new secret."

"Come around tomorrow in business hours," Alexandro answered. "I be prepared to kick the Cubanian off the premises."

"I don't sell secret," Yi Poon stammered and gasped. "I make you present. I give secret now. The senorita, your sister, she is stolen, she is taken from a horse that runs down the beach."

But Alexandro, who had said good night to Leonida but half an hour before, laughed loudly his unbelief and projected again to beat off the trafficker in secrets. Yi Poon was desperate. He could offer him thousand dollars and passed it in Alexandro's hand, saying:

Look Quick

"You go look quick. If the senorita stop in this house now, you keep all this money. If the senorita no stop, then you give money back."

And Alexandro was convinced. A minute later he was leaving the house with his saddled horse. The house pedro, their own upon from round sleepy were tuning and saddling their mules and mules and mules, while the palace folks was pulling on riding gear and equipping themselves with guns.

In and out more rapidly, and on the various paths back to the Caribbean, the Solanos scattered, speeding their way through the dark for the trail of the abductors. As chance would have it, thirty hours before Leonida had left the house of the Solanos and, following it, so that, engaged in its race footsteps of God, where first on the Main picked up the trail and found the entire party of twenty men and women cooking and eating breakfast.

Twenty to one never fair and always impossible, did not appeal to Henry Morgan's Anglo-Saxon mind. What it did appeal to was the dynamite loaded mule, tethered apart from the bundled forty-odd animals. Leaving when Torres rode along in the sand and stepped almost behind him.

Then, with all the members of the homeward wave going to bed, Leonida, just starting to let down her hair, heard a light tapping on the outside of the bedroom window. Warning her in low tones to be quiet, she opened the door and Henry Morgan handed her a crumpled note, which Torres had written, asking for a rendezvous.

"It is like a novel," said Alvarado Solano.

"A evil ghost! Martinez, the twin brother amended.

"A Christ ghost you couldn't know your finger from," Jefe Henry laughed.

"The very thing who saved Leonida and me from the flood," said Henry Morgan. "The seller of secrets." Leonida gurgled. "He of he hasn't brought a new secret I think is unsupposed."

"What do you want, Cubanian?" Alexandro, the eldest of the Solano brothers, demanded angrily.

Torres Waited

Torres waited on the road and felt the furious horse and ass with horse, the Cuban assistant to the hacienda road and to the hacienda of Jefe Ramon. But Torres knew that twenty feet away, in the jungle that screened the beach, Yi Poon and Leonida, pinioned-bundled, still mute, with crouching heads and very alert and very sober Indians with a recently acquired knife slowed under his belt. Yi Poon and his assistants, trailing Torres, came in the sand and stepped almost behind him.

Then, with all the members of the homeward wave going to bed, Leonida, just starting to let down her hair, heard a light tapping on the outside of the bedroom window. Warning her in low tones to be quiet, she opened the door and Henry Morgan handed her a crumpled note, which Torres had written, asking for a rendezvous.

Warning her in low tones to be quiet, she opened the door and Henry Morgan handed her a crumpled note, which Torres had written, asking for a rendezvous.

A Futile Attempt

Not for did he take it. In his anxiety to get Leonida to opened the park and filled all his pockets with stones of dynamite, a box of percussion caps and a coil of fuse. With a respectful nod at the head of the dynamite, which he would have liked to explode on Torres' head, he handed Leonida the tail end of repeat he would have to take if he succeeded in sending Leonida from her sister's side.

At Francis, on a previous occasion at Jackson, had seen the treat with silver dollars, so the Henry and Harry a large amount with dynamite—in small in small bundles and the fuses no longer than the length of his thumb, and with detonators four to each end.

Three hours they devoted to taking around the park and the Plantagin of God en he got his opportunity to signal the presence to Leonida; and however precious two hours were would see she found her opportunity to steal away to him, which would not have been so bad had not the fuses been immediately been discovered, and had not the gendarmes and the rest of Torres' party, awakened by the so swiftly to overtake them on foot.

How to Save Your Hair From Falling Out

Scales and dandruff cause the hair to sicken, die and eventually fall out. To get rid of dandruff you have got to keep the scalp clean and the pores open. Everybody's head ought to be washed at least once a week, but don't make the mistake of using common soaps. They contain too much alkali, which leaves the hair dry and harsh. Birt's Head Wash removes dirt, dandruff, germs and microbes. It leaves the scalp soft and moist and the hair fine and glossy. Its regular use will help to completely overcome dandruff and itching scalp. It stops hair from falling out.

THOUSANDS ask for specific instructions on how to remove wrinkles, so it seems advisable to devote an article to that particular subject without further loss of time.

This will mean a repetition of some of the advice given in the preceding article, building up muscle and removing wrinkles are so closely allied that it is impossible to separate them. Remember as you must rub up and strengthen the muscles before you can soften the lines.

Wrinkles are not caused by some trouble in the skin itself as a rule, but by a weakened and relaxed condition of muscles. Creams will not work superficially, but deeply, always taking care not to bruise or irritate the skin.

Facial massage, as given in Lesson I, March issue of Good Housekeeping, tells you how to rub the face up, down and across. Remember, as it tells you not to rub downward, as all the lines of the face tend that way, adding more wrinkles. Following these rules will accelerate them.

An important point to notice is that massage does not consist of mere rich inflations, such as acne, eczema or inflammations, as you run the risk of spreading the infection to other parts.

Before the treatment with a light massage, use only enough oil or cold cream to soften the skin a little and make the manipulation smooth. Make sure that the cold cream is out of the best quality.

With the long strokes to stimulate circulation and bring the blood to the part you are working on. By stimulating with the massage you regulate activity—that is, exercising the muscles of the face by making them contract—you will in a measure be rewarded with quick results. This must be directed by your own will power—one can do it for you, and it is a wonderful work that can accomplish through your own efforts, if only you will be persevering and stick to it. Remember, also, you will not need do the work.

Take the lines around the eyes, commencing at the corner of the eye and with the middle finger of the right hand work lightly and gently from the outside in toward the nose, following the muscle around the eye.

If the lines are deep, stretch the part with the index and middle fingers of left hand, while working with middle finger of right hand, stroking with the two middle fingers over the base from the nose brows downward and outward. This is the only downward stroke used in the facial massage.

To soften the lines of the forehead use the rotary movement with the tips of the fingers. Work upward and outward in small circles from the brows to the hair and over the temples.

Before finishing the treatment exercise the facial muscles. All the muscles in the forehead the frown, the mouth, which is round, and the muscle around the eye. Stretch the lines as much as possible and work over them. Always finish with stroking, and remember that it is the blood that will nourish, and not the cold cream.

Maternal Instinct Prime Requisite in Wife

By Aline Michaelis

HOW shall I select my wife?

"Show me a woman who will be a good mother," and a man reader in the American's prize contest on this subject. So say, in fact, many readers, the maternal instinct being a prime requisite in most of the letters received.

Below are a few of those which receive honorable mention. The prize winners will be announced later in the week.

Choose a Good Mother

"The first thing I would look for in a prospective wife is the wonderful mother instinct; for surely a woman who would be a good mother would also be a true wife. There are many ways by which one may recognize that ancient instinct, which, though old as love, is getting rarer all the time. I would look for a woman with a soul, a woman who has looked beyond life and has realized the vastness of eternity—and can still smile. She should have high ideals, a serene disposition and the beauty that comes of health and the physical joy of living. I will simply add that I haven't found her yet."

The Long, Long Trail

"I could learn to love a girl that could smile when conditions warrant a frown; that would kiss a baby and play with a little pan on the face just as quickly as she would if the baby had just come out of the bath; one that you could trust anywhere, anyhow, any time; one to whom you could confide the innermost secrets of your heart; a girl that would be one you want to be somebody and amount to something; a girl that anyone would love.

"For such a girl I would tear up the Lincoln highway with my finger nails and carry the debris a pocketful at a time and empty it into the Arctic Ocean. When such a girl comes my path, we are going to stand pat with the long, long trail together—provided I can coax her."

The Rhyming Optimist

THE BUSINESS GIRL'S COSTUME

By Aline Michaelis

I SAW a pretty girl one day as I went into town. She looked as lovely as the May in ultramodish gown. Now just a mere, mere man am I and so I would not dare to presume to try to specify the exact shade she would wear. But on her head she had a hat of wondrous size—not low, a peacock large upon it sat and flowers of green and blue.

Her hair was very, very red, the proper shade this year, and out and westward of her head swung earrings from each ear. She wore a skirt, a puzzling skirt. I pondered it in vain until my brain began to hurt. Thought reeled beneath the strain. It was as long as days in June, as long as Arctic nights, as skimpy as a bashful bride prune of circus lady's tights. And this the riddle that I tried, but merely to resign, how did the lady get inside this skirt of strange design?

Although I'd like to linger here the answer to obtain, I'll pass to other bits of gear more candid and more plain. A charming gleam of camouflage, the bodice of her dress, though I must say as a barrage 'twas not a great success. With wrist watch, beads of jet and jade and dainty satin pumps, this charming maid, as well arrayed, made others look like frumps.

Thought I, a cinch that girl has got—she knows no toil or cares; but, like the lilies in the lot, glad rags she always wears. Just then she called out: "My, but I'm late! How will I ever write a dozen business letters and get them off by night?"

A Matter of Mathematics

A woman, whose hobby was the psychology and the esoteric influences of colors, was deeply gratified one morning when her husband admitted that there might be something in her theory after all. "Dawson told me something today which seems to go to prove it," he said. "Dawson" questioned Mrs. Madison, amazed, for Dawson was the manager of her husband's stables. "Yes; he says the bays eat more than the grays." "Really! How does he account for it?" "Why, there are ten more bays than grays."

To Banish Wrinkles and Freshen Up Quickly

After a strenuous day outdoors, when winds, heat and exhaustion have combined to take away one's freshness and smooth the skin's wrinkle out, try a) after a bother or trolley day before the effects has brought need for extra rejuvenation. Maybe there's a dance on for the evening, or some other social event. How in the world can one manage herself presentable, looking as she does? It's quite easy.

Just get an ounce of powdered saxolite and a half pint witch hazel at the nearest drug store, mix the two and bathe the face in the solution for two or three minutes. Then look out your mirror and behold the wonderful transformation! Wrinkles have vanished, lines have been routed and "flirted me," marks of fatigue have flown, and you look so much brighter and younger you can hardly believe your eyes. So one need hesitate to try this, the witch hazel and saxolite being so perfectly harmless.—Advertisement.

When a Girl Marries

A NEW SERIAL OF YOUNG MARRIED LIFE

Ann Lisle Writes Interestingly of the Trials and Slight Jealousies of a Bride

By Ann Lisle

Copyright, 1919, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

REMEMBERING all her kindly interest, I assured her that I think I meant it in spite of my discovery that her father's company had ruined Jim's father. After all, vengeance was not mine. And in spite of her father's business methods and her own friendship with Pat Dalton, Carlotta Sturges had won a right to my kindness.

A long, lonely interval after Carlotta's call, and then the telephone again. It was Jim. I blurted out that we had found Betty.

"Great! Bully! Didn't I tell you so?" he cried, almost absentmindedly. "Now you'll be in a mood to celebrate my forming a new firm. Meet me at the Occident Theatre at 8:15."

"But, Jim—must I have dinner alone?" I cried.

"Oh, cheer up; that won't hurt you. Just think how happy you are about Betty and cut out the whimpering. Meet me at 8:15. And mind you, look sweet. No grouch, now!"

"All right," I promised. "But you haven't told me who's in the new firm. Jim—Jim!——"

But Jim had rung off.

CHAPTER CXXXIX.

WHEN I got to the theatre at a quarter past eight Jim was waiting. With him was Dick West. I had a sudden feeling of relief because it wasn't Tom Mason, as I had been fearing ever since Jim's abruptly ended telephone message to me.

"Military promptness," said Jim, beaming. "We Harrisons are never late, West. Ann, meet the new firm—Harrison, West & Co., oil stocks a specialty."

"Shake, partner," said Dick West with a conscious exaggeration of his Western manner.

He seized my hand in the smooth-fingered grip of his slim brown ones and flashed his sharp brown eyes across my face, smiling a slightly distorted maroon-lipped smile. Good-looking, alert and with that touch of the exotic that marked his sister, Doris, Dick West struck me again as a man to like, but not to trust.

"The new firm!" I said, smiling in self-defense, even while I was feeling impressions. "I hope you'll always do as well as with Salt Lake. Let's hope this play is a jolly way of celebrating—a good beginning. And we've our Betty safe again, too."

"Betty?" said Dick West idly.

Jim scowled, either at my ill-success in seeming cordial when I didn't feel so, or at what he had to tell.

"Oh, a girl who threw a scare into us. But that's all over now. We aren't going to this show. Anne, Couldn't get a thing at any of the agents. We'll jump a taxi and go round to the Barrington. Dryesen said he'd have something there for me."

So we stowed ourselves away into a taxi with the calm extravagance of the new-rich who forget how they have walked the week before to save carfare. And we whirled over to the other theatre, where Jim hurried up to the box office and demanded the four tickets Dryesen had sent over for Mr. Harrison.

Only a Box Left

"Best we could do was a box," said the ticket agent.

"I'll take it," replied Jim carelessly, shoving a yellow bill under the ticket window.

"But, Jim—that's wasting three seats," I murmured aghast. And then, before Jim could express the annoyance that seemed flaming at me from his eyes, Dick West broke in:

"They ought to serve theatre boxes filled or empty as required. It is a shame to waste the seats. Why not phone for that pretty little sister of yours?"

"No to it!" laughed Jim. "That'll please Phoebe and save Anne from an attack of conscience."

"Well, I'll tell you what's better than phoning!" exclaimed Dick West with what seemed an effort to appear suddenly inspired. "I'll run 'round and get her. I've just remembered that she's dining with Miss Mason—she mentioned it last night. So I'll bring the hostess along and see if I can't pick up another man. See you later, folks."

Hardly waiting for Jim's nod of approval, he hailed a taxi and was whirled away.

"Might as well chase in and see the beginning of the show," said Jim. "I'll leave the tickets in the box office. West'll guess where they are, all right."

I managed to swallow all comments, exclamations, objections and questions and meekly preceded Jim into the theatre and down the aisle to the stage box. The opening curtain was already on, but I received my reward for amiability and discretion when Jim stooped swiftly in the shadow and kissed me. The lights came up on the box and the curtains at the back of the box and kissed me.

"The front of the box for yours, little lady," he whispered. "You look pretty enough to divide applause with the front-row chorus girls."

"How about the star?" I asked, preening myself pertly and making ready with great delight to flirt with my husband.

Jim Rather Annoyed

"Infant, you look as if you might be her granddaughter."

Jim laid his fingers on my shoulder and propelled me to the front of the box. I could feel the magnetism of his touch through the chiffon of my dress and thrilled with happiness. But when I reached to take his hand he drew it away quickly and busied himself with his program.

"Want to look like a couple of honeymooners from the country?" he whispered, with an annoyance that was only partly masked.

STEELS CLIMB, MOTOR ISSUES FOLLOW

Big Gains on New York Exchange at Opening and Later

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were strong in New York at noon, but a little below their morning highest. Steels were outstanding late in the forenoon, but on reaction of importance after a strong opening. Gains of 2 points or more were made by twenty points. Steels were advanced the most. Among the motors Studebaker and Chandler points. Steels were leaders in the upward movement which began with the ralfroads, followed by motors, sugars, rubbers and a number of specialties. Several specialties made large gains. Reading was the biggest trader.

By noon U. S. Steel was up 1¾ at 113¼, after that gave the market a strong start. Issues to open at their highest recorded prices included United Cigar Stores, Crucible and Republic Steel. Among those to open at their highest figures for the year were Cuban American Sugar, Cuba Cane, Baldwin, Central Leather, Inspiration, Lackawanna Steel and Pressed Steel Car. Mex. ex-dividend, $3, opened at 66, the highest recorded price was 72. Steels were the strongest group of the market, but gains were almost universal in all departments. Business was brisk from the opening of the exchange and trading continued active for the hour. Many demand orders had been executed.

INDUSTRIAL SITUATION BETTER.

The advance of steel stocks was said to be evidence that the industrial situation has greatly improved. Building operations are expanding, especially in the West. Chicago reports that in June this year construction exceeded that of the corresponding 1918 month by 54 per cent. The comparative gain for the first half of January was 24 per cent. New England reports for the last six months gain of 100 per cent. The favorable crop outlook is becoming more of an influence daily, not only in the stock market but in all lines of trade. There was extensive buying for securities by Westerners this morning, and orders from other sections warmed the wires at the week-end. Labor is more settled, which indicates the busiest Autumn the country has ever known. There are a few disadvantages to be considered, however. Fear of labor shortage is growing. More banks are drawn in harvest fields, and it is likely to be a dearth of cars for crop moving when the time comes, it is claimed.

NEW YORK BANK STATEMENT.

The weekly statement of New York clearing house banks as to actual condition of loans, deposits and cash reserves and an increase of $109,857,000 in surplus reserves, is satisfactory enough. The Federal Reserve Bulletin says the United States is not only possessed of a huge stock of gold currently, but owns no claim to more of the revolving free gold of the world in payment of its favorable merchandise balance. The balance approximates $2,000,000,000 in the last three years and bids fair to continue at the same rate for two years to come. On this statement the entire capital of the proposed foreign financing corporation may be subscribed by the government. The capital will probably be $100,000,000, and it is estimated that the corporation will issue from $1,000,000,000 to $3,000,000,000 in debentures to the public.

Chartered in Massachusetts

The latest corporations to be granted Massachusetts charters are: Boston Realty Building Company, capital $1,000,000; Boston Wellesley, capital $150,000; Boston Company, Boston, dentrifices, $250,000; Hillman's West End Company of Boston and Woonsocket, R. I., $2,000,000.

Exporters Ask for Million

Exporters have applied to the War Finance Corporation for export loans amounting to $1,000,000. So far no application has yet been granted.

State Can Afford to Aid Poor in Securing Homes

City Councilor Edward F. McLaughlin is urging the passing of a law which will provide for the construction by the State of buildings in which families, now suffering undue hardship from the great raise of rents, may find relief.

There are two alternate proposals, one that the private enterprise shall, as a public service, undertake this construction charging therefor only its cost. The other is that the State shall undertake it or authorize the City of Boston so to do.

This is not an unprecedented proposal. The English government is about to do it. It is being seriously discussed in a great many of our American communities and is actually being undertaken in some. Few things are more important than the question of providing proper homes for our people. We can hear the timid and the prosperous say—"Oh, this will cost enormous, incalculable sums." It will indeed be very expensive, but it will be no more expensive than if undertaken by private enterprise, as it must be if the public does not undertake it, and there will, in case the public does undertake it, be a healthy absence of profiteering.

Stand on the corner of any of our boulevards or highways and count the automobiles that pass in an hour and then consider what it costs to maintain an automobile and then ask yourself if any family in Massachusetts ought to be permitted to go inadequately housed so long as so many thousands of people in the State can afford the great expense of an automobile. An automobile which a family can afford is not, of course, a luxury, but is a healthful, energizing, educating instrument of pleasure and profit—so long as you can afford it. Families of moderate circumstances are often able to support a car by stopping the little wastes, and in such cases an automobile is a help and not a burden.

But in any case a State whose citizens can support automobiles can afford to aid the extremely poor to get homes and can afford to protect the poor women about to become mothers in their time of trial.

We hope that some relief may be obtained in some way from the distressing conditions which have grown out of the scarcity of houses.

How to Make Sure NOW of Ample Winter Coal Supply

There is ample coal in the United States, easily workable and within reasonable distance of the places of consumption. There is plenty of labor available, willing to work in the mines at prices now prevailing. The high price of coal makes it easily possible to pay these prices. The banks are bursting with money, which should be easy to obtain for such a necessary industrial function as the production of coal. The railroads, which, when taken over by the government, successfully hauled not only this country's abnormal war-time coal demands, but supplied most of the outside world besides, are now freed from this overload and stand ready to place all the coal needed in the bins of the consumer.

So much for the supply. In respect to demand, the war is over, and it is no longer necessary to waste large supplies of coal on the manufacture of munitions or to send abnormal quantities abroad to supply peoples unable to supply themselves because engaged in war. Our normal consuming industries have not yet resumed peace-time activities to the extent of requiring even a normal peace-time supply of coal. High prices and other economic circumstances have reduced consumption. The warm Winter of 1918-19 left a surplus of coal in the market.

Now, in the face of these conditions come the coal producers and predict a coal famine next Winter. Their statement is corroborated by the United States Fuel Administration. The only escape, they say—and they do not admit that even this would permit a complete escape—is by the people buying their Winter coal now—a wholly abnormal and for many consumers an impossible condition. The excuse given is that the producers have not the capital to work the mines and that the consumers must not only pay the exorbitant profits on coal that capital demands, but must also provide the capital.

If the coal producers are not exaggerating, the people are confronted with a peril that has no excuse for existing. It is a confession that either the government's power and intelligence or the system of private ownership of the coal mines, or both, have failed.

The people will justly have no patience with any situation that leads to a coal famine—or anything approaching a coal famine—next Winter. There is no excuse for a condition so simply remedied. The American Government assuredly ought not to confess its impotence to handle such an elementary and simple problem in respect to one of our greatest necessities. Having power to prevent such a calamity, it must not permit the industrial paralysis and domestic suffering which a coal famine would cause. Therefore, unless we can be assured, right now, by responsible authority, that the producer will go to work at once and get out sufficient coal for all our needs next Winter, the Government should immediately take control of the mines and operate them for the benefit of the people.

Firm Insistence Necessary Upon Order in Old Mexico

Senator Poindexter is profoundly right when he says we should have a President who "would fulfill the responsibilities our nation has assumed in Mexico."

In spite of the present Executive's shuffling evasions, we have committed ourselves before mankind to the responsibility of protecting American lives in Mexico and along the border, American property lawfully acquired and held in Mexico, and the lives and lawful holdings of foreigners.

This obligation, so far as it relates to Americans, is inherent in the functions of government.

But with regard to Mexico the United States is under the further obligation inherent in its assertion and persistent defence of the Monroe Doctrine.

Under this doctrine it is very difficult, it is embarrassing and provocative of popular and political misunderstandings, for a foreign government, say Great Britain or France, to apply to Mexico in behalf of their abused nationals the same kind of protective or penal effects which they would unhesitatingly apply if the scene of the offending were not within the Monroe Doctrine's zone.

These foreign countries look to the United States to secure in that zone a kind of administration in which the lawful interests of foreigners shall be reasonably safe.

Unless it is enforced by us so as to make American areas reasonably secure for civilization we must look forward to the possibility that our role of exclusive guardianship may one day be seriously contested.

OUT OF my window.
THERE'S a narrow path.
THAT LEADS to the road.
AND I can see it.
FROM WHERE I sit.
AND ON every morning.
THE LADY I married.
SO LONG ago.
PUTS CRUMBS out there.
AND BITS of bread.
AND THE birds have come.
AND HAVE carried it off.
AND HAVE eaten there.
AND HAVE fussed around.
AND I think the wrens swear.
AND, ANYWAY.
JUST AN hour ago.
THEY WERE all out there,
AND CUSSING each other
AND PICKING up crumbs.
WHEN ALL at once.
ALONG CAME a squirrel
WITH A striped back.
AND HE nosed right in.
AMONG ALL the birds.
AND STOOD up on his haunches.
AND I think he said something.
AND WHATEVER it was.
IT STARTED up a row.
BECAUSE THE way the birds acted.
IT WAS plain they were sore.
AND WHILE they were chattering.
AND BEEFING about it.
THE LITTLE ground squirrel
GLOMMED ONTO the bread
AND BEAT it away
WITH THE biggest piece
AND A fool little wren
ABOUT AS big as a minute
TOOK AFTER the squirrel
AND THE squirrel disappeared.
IN A bunch of deep grass.
AND THE fool wren came back.
AND TRIED to explain.
WHILE THE squirrel got away.
OR IT may have been bragging.
THAT IT chased him away.
AND WHATEVER it was.
THE REST of the birds.
STARTED KIDDING the wren.
AND IT started a fight.
AND WHILE they were fighting.
THE GROUND squirrel came back.
AND WHAT bread there was left.
HE GLOMMED onto that.
AND WENT bounding away.
LIKE A rubber ball.
IN QUICK little leaps.
AND THE party broke up.
AND THE birds flew away
AND ALL of the wrens.
FLEW INTO the trees.
AT THE end of the porch.
AND I went outside.
AND THEY lit onto me.
AND FROM what I could hear.
IF I understand wrens.
THEY HAVE an idea.
THAT I ought to go out.
AND KEEP watch for the squirrel.
AND DRIVE him away.
AND I should do that.
TO A poor little squirrel
I MOST certainly won't

I THANK you.

THE HEALTHIEST HOME

The flat is hot and dusty and its air is old and musty.
The window panes are dirty and the floors are thick with grit.
The sink is full of dishes like the ocean's full of fishes
The place looks like a shanty that a hurricane had hit.

The bedroom shows more collars than a millionaire has dollars.
While shirts and ties and stockings fight for space upon the floor.
The bed is tossed in billows of the blankets, sheets and pillows
As though no band had smoothed them since a week or two before.

The potted plants will never bloom again. They're dead forever.

"JA DA" ON THE RAIL

They were standing 'em up on one of the "Narrow Gauge" trains to Revere Beach on the Fourth. In the superheat everybody was willing to fight a la Toledo. Suddenly a graphophone burst into "Ja Da! Ja Da!" Four young fellows had a black case, like a portable typewriter case. It held a small music machine. They had opened the thing and started it up. In no time half the car was whistling, singing or humming the air, while the other half grinned. Music had charms to soothe even the most perspiring.

SOMEBODY'S GOT IT

Did you observe that, despite the high cost of everything worth while and the continual yowl about hard times, more automobile plates for pleasure cars were issued in Massachusetts during the first half of this year than during the entire twelve months of 1918? THINK OF YOUR WORK FIRST; THEN OF YOUR WAGES

You are a young man in need of a job.

But when the job is forthcoming you haggle about the wages which the position pays, and you forget that your youth and inexperience must be tried out before others will be as confident of your ability as you are.

Of course, if you can point to certain accomplishments and show that you are justified in demanding higher salary from the start, well and good.

But a firm with standing high enough offers recompense proportionate to the requirements, and you can take it or leave it, for they are not going to give a young and inexperienced lad the "whip hand" at the start. Instead of seesawing back and forth over the money side of it, why don't you pitch in wholeheartedly, as if the business were your very own, and show what you can do.

There is a way to get the news up higher so that you will be recognized if you can deliver.

There are too many grafters, many of them not realizing it themselves, but time and this reconstruction period will show them up.

WHAT WOMEN CAN DO TO AID THE SOLDIERS

By Col. Arthur Woods,

Assistant to the Secretary of War, In Charge of the War Department's Campaign to Re-employ Soldiers.

THE work of helping our thousands of service men to find a place in civilian life with the least possible loss of time and expenditure of effort, is no less a job for the women of the United States than it is for the men. It is a job for American citizens, regardless of sex, and a rather fitting one just at present, it seems to me, for the women of the country to undertake as their first big task since the passage of the Federal Suffrage Amendment, now on its speedy way toward ratification and adoption as national law.

The War Department, with the aid of seven other government bureaus, has undertaken to correlate and supplement the work of all other agencies throughout the country interested in this problem of giving discharged soldiers, sailors and marines, employment that will in every way satisfy their normal needs. We are out to bring the soldier without a job and job without a soldier together. And to do this we need the women.

In Three Ways

The women can help in a very practical fashion in three ways.

FIRST: They can enter the field and do the actual work that the men of our allied organizations are doing. Much of this work consists in conducting investigations among employers. We cannot place soldiers if we do not have a thorough knowledge of the employing field. Women make admirable investigators. We have some already, and more could be used to great advantage. Women who have been trained through their club activities, suffrage campaigns and other public duties, to make canvasses and surveys, will find themselves particularly well fitted to this work. This great campaign for re-employment of our fighting men is carried on by volunteer workers entirely—except for departmental agents of the government who have been assigned to it—and if we can enlist the aid of some of our women, who do not have all their time occupied, we shall be adding to our strength materially.

SECOND: The women, as citizens, as public housekeepers, can do a great work in our "Spruce Up" campaign. The War Department is urging private manufacturers, owners of estates, buildings, factories, homes, etc., to repair their buildings, their walks, their roads, and thus provide employment for the returned service men until our impending labor shortage becomes an actuality, and they may be put into permanent jobs.

Women Know Best

But we are also urging repairs and extensions on public utilities, whether privately or publicly owned and controlled, and here the women can perform a work that will be peculiarly theirs. Women know best of all what our schools, our parks, our health agencies, need for improvement, and women can, even better than men, wage this campaign for better public institutions. The "Spruce Up" campaign we feel to be a most valuable method of solving the unemployment problem because it works for a double good. Repairs during the war were at a standstill, and as a result, are now badly needed all over the country.

THIRD: Women can, through their multifold organizations, lend the weight of moral influence, of financial assistance, of public support, to our campaign. We should like every woman's club in the country back of us solidly, by deed as well as by word. We should like every woman's organization to pass resolutions of confidence in and support of this great patriotic movement. And we should like, as a follow-up to these resolutions, a Soldiers' Employment Committee formed for every such organization.

Women are already helping us in great numbers, but we need all women. The war is not over until industry has reassimilated all workers, and until our disorganized industrial world is once more on a standardized, normal basis. The sooner all women get behind the movement to fit soldiers and jobs together, the sooner our end will be accomplished, and the sooner can we say with truth that the war is really over, and won.

A TALK WITH WOULD-BE "MOVIE" STARS

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

THE dreams of youth! Who has the heart to crush such beautiful, iridescent imaginings? I have seen as many cases of their coming true as of their failure to materialize; and, to paraphrase a famous line, it is better to have dreamed and lost than never to have dreamed at all.

But there is a great difference between one big, constructive dream that exclusively occupies the mind and a whim held for a little while, only to be replaced by another one.

If I can judge by the many letters from young girls I receive, the favorite, obsessing dream of girlhood today is that of being a great movie actress.

One girl writes me: "I am taking a commercial course in school. I get good marks in everything, but when I finish and go to be a stenographer I know I shall never be interested in my work. I cannot keep my mind on my books. I am not in love, but I want to be a movie star. I saw Miss Pickford in a play the other evening, and I know I could have taken a part like that in a picture and proved a success. All my life I have hoped and longed to go on the stage."

There are thousands of girls all over the country, my dear, who are dreaming the same dream. But they cannot, of course, all be great screen stars.

Perhaps a few of the number will be, but a very, very few. The percentage of successes will be extremely tiny, when you consider the multitude of aspirants. And what is the reason?

At first glance, the answer would seem to be that the chosen few are either lucky above their fellows, or else that exceptional opportunities came their way.

What Is Luck, Anyway?

But what is luck, good or bad? If we could get at the secret mental processes of people we should find the answer. Their inward vision—what Plato called "the eye of the soul"—is turned unwaveringly in a certain direction, either toward disaster or success. They hold, perhaps without being completely aware of it, a mental picture of themselves which will inevitably come into manifestation.

The opportunity comes to them because there is something in themselves which has created it.

Let us say that a thousand girls are, like yourself, longing to be screen stars. The large proportion of them are merely looking at results. They argue this way:

"I am prettier than many of the movie actresses. I am graceful. I can dance and ride and swim and skate. I know I could act. So why shouldn't I use my talents in the pictures and get the rewards, the large salaries, the beautiful clothes, the applause of the world?"

But—and you know there are usually a mountain of "buts" in the way of every achievement—beautiful people do not always photograph beautifully, and for screen purposes your photographs must, so to speak, go nature one better.

Look Before You Leap

You must not only be graceful, but have the art of plastic poses. And are you sure that you possess the undefined and indefinable gift of screen magnetism? It is the fundamental of all success in the pictures. It is some rare, vibrant, electric quality which is absolutely necessary, and, lacking it, all your other charms are as dust.

Also, have you the power to express all human emotions? "Certainly," you reply. "Watch me." And you stand before the mirror and begin to "register" hope, fear, joy, grief, etc.

It is highly probable that you are merely making faces.

A great actress does not contort her features nor grimace. She conveys the effect of emotion. How? Ah, do not ask me. That is the secret of her genius, perfected by experience and hard work.

I am not writing this to discourage you or any one. From the ranks of the thousands of girls who today dream of this career will step forth the actresses of the stage and screen of tomorrow. But of the many who will feel called, very few will be chosen. To this infinitesimal minority the gates of iron will swing open.
